Experimental Studies in Recall and Recognition When studying incidental memory Myers used sommmmm recall tlibeqipqs recognition and sometimes both methods of testing according to which the material was best adapted In connection with the testing of incidental memory for coins he writes The test was begun by merely having the circles drawn but at the suggestion of E K Strong Jr the recognition test was added and finally used alone It is certainly preferable because of the time saved both in applying the test and in dealing with the results though there is the disturbing element due to the large number of circles before the eye Later when mjqia 14 made a comparative study of recognition and recall he drew the following distinguishable lists were given simultaneously for learning In one condition subjects recalled all three lists in a second condition each list was given a different type of retention test although one of the lists was recalled All subjects were fully informed of the materials and tests The critical interest was in the recall of the same list in the two conditions Several lines of thought led to the expectation that recall would be better when three different retention tests were used than when all lists were recalled Three experiments gave little support to the expectation To enhance differential encoding of the lists to match the retention tests a fourth experiment was conducted that included a condition in which subjects learned each list separately before simultaneous learning No evidence for differential encoding was found There was relatively little transfer from a single list learning to simultaneous learning suggesting that switching from a single list to simultaneous learning of three lists represents a marked change in context Author Recall and Recognition of Pictures and Words Robert E.
