The first ever in depth analysis of Canada's hockey teams at the World Junior Championships, it traces teams' participation from the early years when the tournament was an invitational (1974-76) through the first official years when players such as Wayne Gretzky, Dino Ciccarelli, and Mike Gartner played for Canada to the recent years of Paul Kariya, Eric Lindros, and Jason Allison. The book examines the World Juniors chronologically, year by year, including a preview chapter to the 1999 championships in Winnipeg. It provides the most comprehensive anecdotal, factual, and statistical information ever compiled for the world's most prestigious junior tournament. In addition, each chapter is accompanied by rarely seen and never before published photographs. It also includes a guide and record book for the World Juniors, information about all 386 players who have represented Canada over the years, and every team and individual record imaginable.

Canadian Gold 2002 Andrew Podnieks, 2002. The must-have Olympic hockey collectible. The women had no chance. The men were nothing but one of six teams capable of winning. So said the critics and naysayers. But on February 21st and February 24th, 2002, the women and men of Canada's hockey teams completed a historic double, a perfect sweep of hockey gold at Salt Lake 2002. The men had to overcome a sceptical media and obsessive public pressure; the women had to battle the mental rigours of having lost eight games in a row to the U.S. But a loonie buried at centre ice by the Canadian rink crew and superior psychological preparation and inner confidence gave the Canadians the needed fortitude to overcome all odds and a pro American crowd to win gold in both men's and women's hockey. For the men, it represented the end of a fifty-year drought that went back to the 1952 Edmonton Mercurys. For the women, the win was sweet revenge for an unexpected loss at Nagano in 1998. For all of Canada, the wins not only satisfied a nation infatuated with hockey, it helped define and reaffirm our country's identity.

Andrew Podnieks attended and reported on virtually every hockey game in Salt Lake as a journalist for the IIHF. He is a hockey historian and full-time author with numerous titles to his credit, including Canada's Olympic Hockey Teams: The Complete History 1920-1998, Red, White, and Gold: Canada at the World Junior Championships 1974-1999, Portraits of the Game: Classic Photographs from the Turofsky Collection at the Hockey Hall of Fame, and The Essential Blue and White Book 2002. His newest book, A Day in the Life of the Maple Leafs, will be published this fall. Andrew Podnieks lives in Toronto, Ontario.
