experienced unprecedented reform and restructuring in recent years Restructuring has largely been driven by a global agenda that has promoted the development of human capital as the key to economic competitiveness in the global market This book adopts an inter disciplinary approach drawing not only on education research but also from the fields of industrial sociology management studies and labour process theory to locate the reform agenda within a wider picture relating to teachers their professional identities and their experience of work In doing so the book draws on critical perspectives that seek to challenge orthodox policy discourses relating to remodelling Illustrating of how education policy is shaped by discourses within the wider socio political environment and how unionization and inter organizational bargaining between unions exerts a decisive but often ignored influence on policy development at both a State and institutional level this book is a must read for anyone researching or studying employment relations

Adult Interactive Style Intervention and Participatory Research Designs in Autism Lila Kossyvaki,2017-09-13 Regardless of their cognitive and linguistic abilities people with autism can often find it difficult to develop basic communicative skills that are necessary to gain full control over their environment and maintain their independence Building on the author s own cutting edge research Adult Interactive Style Intervention and Participatory Research Designs in Autism examines the impact that the interactive style of neurotypical individuals could have on the spontaneous communication of children with autism This book provides clear and detailed guidance on how to conduct research into autism in real world settings such as schools and homes Kossyvaki critically evaluates a wealth of relevant case studies and focuses on a number of methodological issues that researchers are likely to face when carrying out research of this complex nature The author walks the reader through present literature on the importance of spontaneous communication and the atypical way that this tends to develop in autism before bringing the results of her own research to bear on the question of how the interactive styles of neurotypical individuals can impact on the spontaneous communication of people with autism Adult Interactive Style Intervention and Participatory Research Designs in Autism is essential reading for academics researchers and postgraduate students in the fields of special educational needs inclusion autism research methods and educational and clinical psychology

What Shall We Tell the Children? Stuart J. Foster,Keith A. Crawford,2006-04-01 The pages of this book illustrate that as instruments of socialization and sites of ideological discourse textbooks are powerful artefacts in introducing young people to a specific historical cultural and socioeconomic order Crucially exploring the social construction of school textbooks and the messages they impart provides an important context from within which to critically investigate the dynamics underlying the cultural politics of education and the social movements that form it and which are formed by it The school curriculum is essentially the knowledge system of a society incorporating its values and its dominant ideology The curriculum is not our knowledge born of a broad hegemonic consensus rather it is a battleground in which cultural authority and the right to define what is labelled legitimate knowledge is fought over As each chapter in this book illustrates curriculum as theory and practice has never been and can never be divorced from the ethical economic political and cultural conflicts of society which impact so deeply upon it We cannot escape the clear implication that questions about what knowledge is of most worth and about how it should be organized and taught are problematic contentious and very serious

Paradigm Shift of Education Governance in China Yan Wang,2019-10-16 The book addresses the paradigm shift in education governance in China through a study of two legislation episodes in China the 1986 Compulsory Education Law and the 2006 Compulsory Education Law Amendment The research began with two broad questions how was the Compulsory Education Law made and amended Why was it made and amended Using ethnographic interviews and documentary analysis as the main research methods more specific questions on both legislative processes were delved into as the research evolved What were the driving forces behind the 1986 and 2006 legislation What values of compulsory education were assumed in their central decisions What was the institutional rationale underpinning them Data was collected through ethnographic interviews with key informants involved in the policymaking process The research findings were analyzed and presented on the basis of narration analysis The policymaking process of the legislation was then analyzed from three paradigms agenda setting decision making and organizational behavior Finally by examining the results of the previous stages of analysis and further comparing the two cases the research arrived at a theoretical framework for education governance that embraces three essential elements political ideology perceived value of education and institutional rationale A thorough analysis of the two legislative processes identified that the political ideology which shifted from efficiency oriented economic well being to equity oriented social cohesion steered the agenda setting of the compulsory education legislation The perceived value of education reflects the role that education plays in development changing from economic value to social value The institutional rationale essentially determines strategies by which compulsory education materializes with a variance from governing by goal and mobilization to governing by accountability and regulation In conclusion education governance in China witnessed a paradigm shift from economic instrumentalism to social rationalism between mid 1980s and 2006
