Identity, Agency and Fieldwork Methodologies in Risky Environments Monique Marks,Julten Abdelhalim,2020-06-29 Bringing together a unique set of narratives from social scientists who have been situated in risky environments this volume discusses the moral and ethical dilemmas of doing fieldwork in environments that are characterised by insecurity These narratives are situated in the Global South and the majority of the authors are themselves from the Global South bringing both authenticity and originality to the scholarship in this book Coming from the Global South can both facilitate and complicate navigating the complexity of doing research in places characterised by precariousness The authors demonstrate how the morality of the moment and indigenous sensibility is often more pertinent than formal ethical considerations as stipulated by universities and other institutions The authors are refreshingly honest about their own identity dilemmas their choices to exit the field prematurely and the raw emotions that emerged in the process of doing fieldwork in these settings This book is likely to be instructive to young researchers entering into fields that are risky often with little instruction or supervision prior to doing so It is also an excellent resource for more seasoned researchers who might have had comparable experiences and are keen to reflect on such research journeys It will be an invaluable resource for teaching qualitative research across a wide spectrum of disciplines This book was originally published as a special issue of Contemporary Social Science Ethics for Graduate Researchers Cathriona Russell,Linda Hogan,Maureen Junker-Kenny,2012-12-31 This

Families of the Missing Simon Robins,2013-05-29 Families of the Missing interrogates the current practice of transitional justice from the viewpoint of the families of those disappeared and missing as a result of conflict and political violence Studying the needs of families of the missing in two contexts Nepal and Timor Leste the practice of transitional justice is seen to be rooted in discourses that are alien to predominantly poor and rural victims of violence and that are driven by elites with agendas that diverge from those of the victims In contrast to the legalist orientation of the global transitional justice project victims do not see judicial process as a priority Rather they urgently seek an answer concerning the fate of the missing and to retrieve human remains As important are livelihood issues where families are struggling to cope with the loss of breadwinners and seek support to ensure economic security Although rights are the product of a discourse that claims to be global and universal needs are necessarily local and particular the product of culture and context And it is from this perspective that this volume seeks both to understand the limitations of transitional justice processes in addressing the priorities of victims and to provide the basis of an emancipatory victim centred approach to transitional justice

Doing Global Fieldwork Jesse Driscoll, 2021-04-13 To do quality research many social scientists must travel to far flung parts of the world and spend long stretches of time living in places they find unfamiliar and uncomfortable No matter how prepared researchers think they are everyone encounters unexpected challenges in the course of their work in the field In Doing Global Fieldwork the political scientist Jesse Driscoll offers a how to guide for social scientists who are considering extended mixed methods international fieldwork He details the major steps in fieldwork planning and execution from creating a plan to what happens when political conditions throw up obstacles to research to distilling and writing up research findings upon return Driscoll emphasizes the ability to improvise and adapt because in the field ideas will shift plans will change and something will inevitably go wrong He offers a practical overview of the types of psychological and physical preparation professionalization and self presentation that social scientists conducting research abroad need to prioritize Driscoll describes the challenges that arise when working in difficult settings such as war zones areas of contested sovereignty and volatile nondemocratic states He explores the practical and ethical considerations for data collection in these unique situations including whether and how much to reveal about one's research and common psychological harms associated with fieldwork Doing Global Fieldwork is an up to date methodological guide for graduate students and social science researchers of all stripes who need blunt no nonsense advice about how to make the best of their time in the field

Applying Psychology Orla Lynch, Carmel Joyce, 2018-09-19 This volume investigates the application of psychological theory to the case of terrorism and political violence This book offers a framework for approaching psychological research on terrorism that encourages an explicit orientation to the issues that have acted as road blocks to the potential for psychology as a discipline to meaningfully contribute to terrorism research The framework encourages researchers to define the research parameters in clear concise terms devoid of theoretical jargon and rooted in an understanding of real world social problems Furthermore researchers are encouraged to be explicit about the vantage point through which the problem is being viewed i e is it a problem for participants themselves For broader society for policy makers and other stakeholders and what the intended outcome of the research might be Furthermore this volume aims to demonstrate how to apply existing psychological theory to terrorist related phenomenon In doing so researchers are asked to consider whether the research problem is psychological in nature and if so what existing theories can help explain if not alleviate the problem As such researchers in psychology are encouraged to dig deep to tap into the wealth of knowledge available in psychology to understand terrorist related phenomenon as embedded within normal psychological processes albeit manifesting in what can be considered exceptional situations and circumstances Applying Psychology The Case of Terrorism and Political Violence will appeal to academics students and professionals interested in applied psychology terrorism studies sociology international security and international relations

Regulating Business for Peace Jolyon Ford, 2015-02-05 This book addresses gaps in thinking and practice on how the private sector can both help and hinder the process of building peace after armed conflict It argues that weak governance in fragile and conflict affected societies creates a need for international authorities to regulate the social impact of business activity in these places as a special interim duty Policymaking should seek appropriate opportunities to engage with business while harnessing its positive contributions to sustainable peace However scholars have not offered frameworks for what is considered appropriate engagement or properly theorised techniques for how best to influence responsible business conduct United Nations peace operations are peak symbols of international regulatory responsibilities in conflict settings and debate continues to grow around the private sector's role in development generally This book is the first to study how peace operations have engaged with business to influence its peace building impact
