Reshaping The Us Left:

Shaping U.S. Military Forces for the Asia-Pacific Michael R. Kraig, 2014-06-04 The first twenty years of post Cold War US defense and diplomatic policies toward Asia have looked a good deal like the previous 50 namely continued deterrence based upon overwhelming offensive military predominance In East Asia all powers harbor common and divergent interests based on fragmented nationalist identities and complex economic interdependence In this multipolar Asian system new Chinese military capabilities could support both the wish to secure its own interests as well as a more expansive vision for regional leadership which might harbor a destabilizing geopolitical agenda How the United States addresses this reality via military procurements and employment concepts for the Asian theater could either detract from or enhance crisis stability The US defense establishment must reorient its force posture to save money manage conflicts of interest and prevent future interstate crises This analysis provides a framework for how the United States should ideally structure and use military power so as to best support the diplomatic resolution of conflicting interests without resorting to full scale warfare It also critiques the usual Western military focus on offensive strategic predominance in force postures itself often fuelled by the unrealistic pursuit of the opponent's complete submission via victory in decisive battles

Radicalism at the Crossroads Dayo F. Gore, 2012-10-01 With the exception of a few iconic moments such as Rosa Parks's 1955 refusal to move to the back of a Montgomery bus we hear little about what black women activists did prior to 1960 Perhaps this gap is due to the severe repression that radicals of any color in America faced as early as the 1930s and into the Red Scare of the 1950s To be radical and black and a woman was to be forced to the margins and consequently these women's stories have been deeply buried and all but forgotten by the general public and historians alike In this exciting work of historical recovery Dayo F Gore unearths and examines a dynamic extended network of black radical women during the early Cold War including established Communist Party activists such as Claudia Jones artists and writers such as Beulah Richardson and lesser known organizers such as Vicki Garvin and Thelma Dale These women were part of a black left that laid much of the groundwork for both the Civil Rights Movement of the 1960s and later strains of black radicalism. Radicalism at the Crossroads offers a sustained and in depth analysis of the political thought and activism of black women radicals during the Cold War period and adds a new dimension to our understanding of this tumultuous time in United States history.

Shaping US Military Law Joshua E. Kastenberg, 2016-04-01 Since the United States entry into World War II the federal judiciary has taken a prominent role in the shaping of the nation's military laws. Yet a majority of the academic legal community studying the relationship between the Court and the military establishment argues otherwise providing the basis for a further argument that the legal construct of the military establishment is constitutionally questionable. Centering on the Cold War era from 1968 onward this book weaves judicial biography and a historic methodology based on primary source materials into its analysis and reviews several military law judicial decisions ignored by other studies. This book is not designed only for legal scholars. Its intended audience consists of Cold War military and political historians as well as political scientists and military and national security policy makers. Although the book's conclusions are likely to be favored by the military establishment the purpose of this book is to accurately analyze the intersection of the later twentieth century's American military political social and cultural history and the operation of the nation's armed forces from a judicial vantage.
