1)

Psychoanalytic Theory

Based on the theory of object relations. This theory focuses on generational relationship development. The objects are parents such as a mother-daughter bond formed during early childhood development. These early developments and bonds formed with parents are brought into adulthood and subsequently enter into marriages. Therapy for couples with this theoretical focus involves the counselor gaining crucial insight into each person's parental relationships. Each person then transfers reorganized thoughts based on reactions, expectations, and perceptions of themselves and others onto the therapist. The counselor may also use dream work, interpretation, and resistance analysis in their therapeutic technique. The outcome of this theoretical approach is typically that catharsis will occur for couples by allowing them to acquire nascent insights into their lives, which creates space for altering the behaviors that probably caused the couples to seek therapy to begin with (Newsome & Gladding, 2014).

2)

Social-Learning Theory

Newsome and Gladding (2014) describe social-learning theory as "learning through modeling and imitation." Essentially, the theory says that we learn a lot of what we know by observing the behaviors of others and couples who seek therapy have too many or too few important behaviors. An example of not enough is someone not knowing how to resolve arguments with their partner and an example of an excess is

Steinmetz, Marvin B. Sussman, 2013-11-11 The lucid straightforward Preface of this Handbook by the two editors and the comprehensive perspectives offered in the Introduction by one of them leave little for a Foreword to add It is therefore limited to two relevant but not intrinsically related points vis a vis research on marriage and the family in the interval since the first Handbook Christensen 1964 appeared namely the impact on this research of the politicization of the New Right and of the Feminist Enlightenment beginning in the mid sixties about the time of the first Handbook In the late 1930s Willard Waller noted Fifty years or more ago about 1890 most people had the greatest respect for the institution called the family and wished to learn nothing whatever about it Everything that concerned the life of men and women and their children was shrouded from the light Today much of that has been changed Gone is the concealment of the way in which life begins gone the irrational sanctity of the home The aura of sentiment which once protected the family from discussion clings to it no more We want to learn as much about it as we can and to understand it as thoroughly as possible for there is a rising recognition in America that vast numbers of its families are sick from internal frustrations and from external buffeting We are engaged in the process of reconstructing our family institutions through criticism and discussion 1938 pp 3 4 Treatment Interventions in Human Sexuality Carol Nadelson, 2012-12-06 Despite much progress in the past ten years American medical schools have woefully inadequate sex education curricula While some have a reasonable amount of lecture time few have clinical opportunities for students to develop practical skills in working with patients who are struggling with sexual problems It is my impression that the same is true in medical and gynecological residencies as well as in graduate schools of psychology counseling and social work This book was specifically written to help fill that gap This is a book for clinicians and it will provide a wealth of practical clinical knowledge and skills in dealing with the gamut of patients sexual concerns problems and dilemmas Twenty four experts have contributed eighteen chapters which address both the common and unusual sexual issues encountered in practice These include sexual concerns from childhood to old age gender identity and sexual preference sexual dysfunction including that of the physically ill and disabled counseling with students premarital marital and divorced patients fertility and infertility and chapters dealing with rape incest and other sexual contacts between adults and children Of particular importance are chapters on human sexuality in American minority populations a chapter on alcohol medication and other drugs and a chapter on medical management of sexual problems in the gay population a subject long ignored by the profession The focus on practical intervention and skill development is amplified by the concluding four appendixes devoted to patient management problems Marital Therapy R. Segraves, 2012-12-06 This book is welcomed to the series as a truly unique contribution to the literature on marital therapy It is written for the empirically oriented psychotherapist regardless of his or her discipline who encounters patients with marital discord and has been distressed by the absence of an acceptable conceptual model for treatment Psychoanalysis behavior therapy general system theory and social learning theory have all made important contributions to treatment But all too often these approaches have focused either on individual psychopathology or on the formal elements of marital interaction This volume is the first to propose an approach to marital therapy which is clinically sophisticated empirically based and which integrates important elements of seemingly disparate theoretical systems The result is a cognitive behavioral model for the treatment of marital discord which borrows from both psychoanalytic and behavioral contributions by translating them into the language of cognitive social psychology The author documents the toll in human suffering as well as the ubiquitous nature of marriage related problems Despite the frequency with which marital dissatisfaction and discord are encountered in clinical practice an amazingly high percentage of mental health professionals have received inadequate training in either the theory or technique of effective clinical intervention The absence of a conceptual framework linking individual psychopathology to interactional difficulties has worsened the problem for clinicians interested in conjoint treatment
