PERSONAL OBSERVATIONS

Facilities

According to my observations, the City Mayor's Office facilities were well ventilated because they have air conditioning in all areas, which makes the workers' work and people inside the facility comfortable. Furthermore, they have janitors who are in charge of keeping the entire facility clean. Aside from that, they have a clean, pleasant-smelling environment, which I highly recommend. Finally, they have all of the appliances and equipment that workers require inside the workplace.

Services

Throughout my immersion at the City Mayor's office, I discovered that they provide services that mostly assist San Pablo citizens with financial problems. First, they provide financial help from kindergarten through higher education. Furthermore, I watched them providing cash assistance to the families of deceased residents and supervising death certificate documents.

Employee

Throughout my immersion in the City Mayor's office, I noticed that the employees were very generous and friendly to the individuals they served. For example, they frequently provide me with food while I am working with them, which is a good thing that has resulted from my enjoyment of my work immersion there. They were also humorous, which made the workplace light and enjoyable. Last but not least, they are dedicated employees both inside and outside of the job.

Management

Throughout my entire immersion in the City Mayor's office, the management was accessible and professional. Overall, the management of the city Mayor's Office, along with its staff, chiefs, and workforce members, was admirable.

Organization

In my humble view, the organization as a whole was very beneficial to the inhabitants of San Pablo City since it served as an avenue of hope for all students who received scholarships from the City Mayor's Office. They have a solid foundation of work that has been obvious through time, and they have a positive relationship with one

Allen,2008-02-25 The development of the American nation has typically been interpreted in terms of its expansion through space specifically its growth westward In this innovative study

Thomas Allen posits time not space as the most significant territory of the young nation. He argues that beginning in the nineteenth century the actual geography of the nation became less important as Americans imagined the future as their true national territory. Allen explores how transformations in the perception of time shaped American conceptions of democratic society and modern nationhood. He focuses on three ways of imagining time: the romantic historical time that prevailed at the outset of the nineteenth century, the geological deep time that arose as widely read scientific works displaced biblical chronology with a new scale of millions of years of natural history, and the technology-driven clock time that became central to American culture by century's end. Allen analyzes cultural artifacts ranging from clocks and scientific treatises to paintings and literary narratives to show how Americans made use of these diverse ideas about time to create competing visions of American nationhood.

Birth of Two Nations: the Republic of China and the People's Republic of China Eric Kwok-wing Leung, 2013-10-30

Birth of two Nations: the Republic of China and the Peoples Republic of China is a historical account how the Republic of China is formally established in 1911 after a bloody struggle that destroyed the Qing Dynasty and once and for all broke the thousands years traditional dynasty cycle. The ensuing events that led to the Peoples Republic of China as it is formally established in 1949. However, the book is more than chronological accounts. For history cannot come in a social vacuum. Factors including historical, cultural, political, and socio-economical that impact and shape the development must be taken into account to enable the readers to have a better understanding of the development. This book therefore explores and interprets sociologically, economically, politically, and historically from the embryonic stage to the full birth of the two nations in account of these factors and the ensuing years. The external forces and pressures, particularly from that of the Japanese aggressors, led to internal discord between the Guomindang Nationalist Party and the Kungchandang Communist Party and the civil war with great suffering by the people. The book attempts to detail the inter-relatedness of these factors with documentations and my personal and my family experience in the developmental years. My mother in particular shared with me when I was old enough, perhaps five or old, how we survived the hardship and suffering during those years of bitter conflict between the warlords of the Guangdong Province and Guangxi Province. Our village in the Guangning County, Guangdong Province, situated in the border of the two provinces, we took the beating first from the Guangxi warlord. I grew up during the eight years war of resistance against the Japanese aggression. Some historians considered the war to be a fourteen years war. It probably depends on which event was considered the starting point since there were so many pretexts and aggressions launched by the Japanese against China. We almost died of starvation, surviving only on sweet potatoes, weeds, and locust. My elder brothers were very bitter for they lost their chance to get an education and destined laborers for life. Personal as it may be, however, it is by no means unique. Chinese people of my cohort, 70 plus, who were in China during those years would be able to collaborate and even share familiar experience of mine and of my family. The book does not attempt to be a scientific account of the development. I tried to be as objective as I can for I am open to scrutinize by my cohort and historians Data of the book come primarily from personal observation in the normal course of daily life and interviews oral history from older Chinese who experienced and witnessed the development constituted a significant part of the study Reviews and critical analysis of available data in English and Chinese related to the development It is a crystallization of available data particularly the oral history that should be preserved for posterity Other sources I gratefully acknowledged I regret and apologize for any inadvertent omission I am specially grateful to my next door neighbor who is close to 90 years old came to the United States as a paper son worked in his fathers restaurant for a number of years He later joined the U S Air Force and became a Staff Sergeant served in WWII and stationed in Kunming China Because his ability to speak Chinese and English he played a significant role between the two governments China and the United States He often commuted in U S Air Force transportation between Kunming and Chongqing the Chinese wartime capital He recalled his experience of those years and provided me with his valuable insight of the two worlds I am grateful to my long time friend Mr Louis Lau for his moral and sponsorship in making this research and endeavor possible His encouragement provided me with the strength and a willingness to make sacrific

The Criminal Process in the People's Republic of China, 1949-1963 Jerome Alan Cohen, 1968 This volume represents the fruits of a preliminary inquiry into one aspect of contemporary Chinese law the criminal process Investigating what he calls China's legal experiment Mr Cohen raises large questions about Chinese law Is the Peoples Republic a lawless power arbitrarily disrupting the lives of its people Has it sought to attain Marx's vision of the ultimate withering away of the state and the law Has Mao Zedong preferred Soviet practice to Marxist preaching If so has he followed Stalin or Stalin's heirs To what extent has it been possible to transplant a foreign legal system into the world's oldest legal tradition Has the system changed since 1949 What has been the direction of that change and what are the prospects for the future Today immense difficulties impede the study of any aspect of China's legal system Most foreign scholars are forbidden to enter the country and those who do visit China find solid data hard to come by Much of the body of law is unpublished and available only to officialdom and what is publicly available offers an incomplete idealized or outdated version of Chinese legal processes Moreover popular publications and legal journals that told much about the regime's first decade have become increasingly scarce and uninformative In order to obtain information for this study Mr Cohen spent 1963-64 in Hong Kong interviewing refugees from the mainland and searching out and translating material on Chinese criminal law From the interviews and published works he has endeavored to piece together relevant data in order to see the system as a whole The first of the three parts of the book is an introductory essay providing an overview of the evolution and operation of the criminal process from 1949 through 1963 The second part constituting the bulk of the book systematically presents primary source material including excerpts from legal documents policy statements and articles in Chinese periodicals In order to show the law in action as well as the law on the books the author has included selections from written and oral accounts by persons who have lived in or visited the People's Republic Interspersed among these diverse materials are Mr Cohen's own comments questions and notes Part III contains an English Chinese glossary of the major institutional and legal terms translated in Part II a bibliography of sources and a list of English language books and articles that are pertinent to an understanding of the criminal process in China Extension of MFN Status to Rumania, Hungary, and the People's Republic of China United States.
