Recent Antarctic and Subantarctic Brachiopods Merrill W. Foster, 1974 Published by the American Geophysical Union as part of the Antarctic Research Series Volume 21 The Recent brachiopod faunas from southernmost South America Antarctica and the Subantarctic consisting of 21 genera and 37 species are described from new material New taxa include the genera Manithyris and Bathynanus Also new are 11 species Compsothyris ballenyi Hispanirhynchia chiliensis Manithyris rossi Liothyrella multiporosa Liothyrella scotti Bathynanus tenuicostatus Eucalathis macrorhynchus Amphithyris hallettensis Dallina eltanini Fallax antarcticus and Magellania spinosa Factor analysis was used to study relationships among morphological characters and environmental parameters In Liothyrella negative associations were found between beak height and water depth The size of the pedicle opening within this genus is associated with the width of the hinge plate and the loop apparently these associations are related to increased dorsal adductor muscle size with increased pedicle size Similar relationships are found in the terebratulids although here all of the characters are also negatively associated with water depth Characters negatively associated with water depth may relate to the differing current strength at various depths Puncta density is positively correlated with water temperature Examples of brachiopod variation are discussed Synonyms have resulted from former failure to study large samples and to appreciate the extent of brachiopod variation A priori valuation of certain characters as being specific is unwarranted since sibling species may be more similar than different subspecies of the same species Many Recent and fossil brachiopod genera are too narrow in definition owing to oversplitting or to a narrow conception of monophyly I advocate somewhat broader and more practical genera for obtaining the maximal information value from such taxa Brachiopods contrary to popular belief are an abundant and viable group in the southern hemisphere faunas Most brachiopods in the Ross Sea appear to have definite niches and habitats but may overlap geographically where population densities are low Brachiopods here can be divided roughly into a slope and a shelf assemblage The greatest species diversity occurs at the seaward edge of the Ross Sea shelf interpreted as an ecotone effect where two different water types meet Only South America and Antarctica appear to have or have had direct communication between some elements of their brachiopod faunas Other similarities between separate southern continents are related to retention of common pre Cenozoic elements or to chance dispersal of larvae across barriers Events related to cooling during the late Pliocene or Pleistocene caused reduction of puncta density shell thickness and spiculation in the Recent fauna and apparently influenced the present species structure at least in Liothyrella uva Gyrothyris mawsoni and Macandrevia

Atkinson, 2003-07-31 Interest in oceanography and marine biology and its relevance to global environmental issues continues to increase creating a demand for authoritative reviews that summarize recent research Oceanography and Marine Biology An Annual Review has catered to this demand since its foundation by the late Harold Barnes more than 40 years ago It is an Catalog of Copyright Entries. Third Series Library of Congress. Copyright Office,1976 Geology and Paleontology of Seymour Island, Antarctic Peninsula Rodney M. Cocks,Sarah L Long,2001-11-29 The growth history of a brachiopod is entombed in its shell but research on fossil and living brachiopods has generated unanswered questions about these marine invertebrates Several contributors to Brachiopods Past and Present comment on their differing structures and morphological detail They use these as examples of ontogenetic and evolutionar Foundations for Ecological Research West of the Antarctic Peninsula Robin M. Ross,Eileen E. Hofmann,Langdon B. Quetin,1996-01-09 Published by the American Geophysical Union as part of the Antarctic Research Series Volume 70 The Long Term Ecological Research LTER Program was established in 1981 by the United States National Science Foundation in recognition of the need to study ecological processes over time spans longer than those of most research grants The LTER Network now consists of 18 sites that span a variety of ecosystem types in the continental United States Alaska Puerto Rico and Antarctica The addition of the Palmer LTER at Palmer Station Antarctica in October 1990 extended the geographical and ecological range of the LTER Network and provided the opportunity to link physical and ecological processes in the northern and southern hemispheres One criterion for establishment of a LTER site is the existence of historical data and observations that can provide a basis for guiding research programs Thus the intent of this volume is to bring together meteorological hydrographical biological and ecological observations made in the general area west of the Antarctic Peninsula and to discuss the processes underlying the observations This compilation of available data and observations in conjunction with the present understanding of processes provides the foundation for long term studies of the ecosystem in the western Antarctic Peninsula region New Brachiopods from the Southern Hemisphere and Cryptopora from Oregon (recent) David D. Gillette,Gustav Arthur Cooper,Rex A. Doescher,Smithsonian Institution,Clayton Edward Ray,1969 New Brachiopods from the Southern Hemisphere and Cryptopora from Oregon (recent) Gustav Arthur Cooper,Smithsonian Institution,1982 The Recent brachiopods described herein were collected during dredging operations of several research vessels the United States R V Eltanin alias Islas Orcadas while on loan to Argentina in Antarctica in the subantarctic waters of the Atlantic around South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands and in the Scotia Sea R V Hero dredging in Antarctic waters R V Anton Bruun operating along the west coast of South America the initial cruises of R V Rafale and Thierry operating in the Gulf of Guinea off the coast of West Africa Seventeen genera are described including 19 species and 10 lots not identified as to species Pelagodiscus atlanticus King Discinisca laevis Sowerby Discinisca species Cryptopora hesperis new species the first report of this genus in the northern Pacific Terebratulina kiiensis Dall and Pilsbry Terebratulina species Abysothyris wyvillei Davidson A cf elongata Cooper Abysothyris species Liothyrella delsolari new
