Distributing Silent Film Serials Rudmer Canjels, 2011-01-25 Tracing the international consumption distribution and cultural importance of silent film serials in the 1910s and 1920s Canjels provides an exciting new understanding of the cultural dimension and the cultural transformation and circulation of media forms Specifically he demonstrates that the serial film form goes far beyond the well known American two reel serial the cliffhanger Throughout the book Canjels focuses on the biggest producers of serials America France and Germany while imported serials such as those in the Netherlands are also examined This research offers new views on the serial work of well known directors as D W Griffith Abel Gance Erich von Stroheim and Fritz Lang while foregrounding the importance of lesser known directors such as Louis Feuillade or Joe May In the early twentieth century serial productions were constantly undergoing change and were not merely distributed in their original form upon import As adjusted serials were present in large quantities or confronted different social spaces nationalistic feelings and views stimulated by the unrest of World War I and the expanding American film industry could be incorporated and attached to the serial form Serial productions were not only adaptable to local discourses they could actively stimulate and interact as well influencing reception and further film production By examining the distribution reception and cultural contexts of American and European serials in various countries this cross cultural research makes both local and global observations Canjels thus offers a highly relevant case study of transnational transcultural and transmedia relations

Reel Latinxs Frederick Luis

Aldama, Christopher González, 2019-09-24 Latinx representation in the popular imagination has infuriated and befuddled the Latinx community for decades. These misrepresentations and stereotypes soon became as American as apple pie. But these cardboard cutouts and examples of lazy storytelling could never embody the rich traditions and histories of Latinx peoples. Not seeing real Latinxs on TV and film reels as kids inspired the authors to dive deep into the world of mainstream television and film to uncover examples of representation good and bad. The result is a riveting ride through televisual and celluloid reels that make up mainstream culture. As pop culture experts Frederick Luis Aldama and Christopher González show the way Latinx peoples have appeared and are still represented in mainstream TV and film narratives is as frustrating as it is illuminating. Stereotypes such as drug lords, petty criminals, buffoons, and sexed-up lovers have filled both small and silver screens and the minds of the public. Aldama and González blaze new paths through Latinx cultural phenomena that disrupt stereotypes, breathing complexity into real Latinx subjectivities and experiences. In this grand sleuthing sweep of Latinx representation in mainstream TV and film that continues to shape the imagination of U.S. society, these two Latinx pop culture authorities call us all to scholarly action.

Making Movies Black Thomas Cripps, 1993-05-20 This is the second volume of Thomas Cripps's definitive history of African Americans in Hollywood. It covers the period from World War II through the civil rights movement of the 1960s, examining this period through the prism of popular culture. Making Movies Black shows how movies anticipated and helped form America's changing ideas about race. Cripps contends that from the liberal rhetoric of the war years, marked as it was by the propaganda catchwords brotherhood and tolerance, came movies that defined a new African American presence both in film and in American society at large. He argues that the war years more than any previous era gave African American activists access to centers of cultural influence and power in both Washington and Hollywood. Among the results were an expanded black imagery on the screen during the war in combat movies such as Bataan, Crash Dive, and Sahara; musicals such as Stormy Weather and Cabin in the Sky; and government propaganda films such as The Negro Soldier and Wings for This Man, narrated by Ronald Reagan. After the war, the ideologies of both black activism and integrationism persisted, resulting in the message movie era of Pinky, Home of the Brave, and No Way Out, a form of racial politics that anticipated the goals of the Civil Rights Movement. Delving into previously inaccessible records of major Hollywood studios among them Warner Bros., RKO, and 20th Century Fox, as well as records of the Office of War Information in the National Archives and records of the NAACP and interviews with survivors of the era, Cripps reveals the struggle of both lesser-known black filmmakers like Carlton Moss and major figures such as Sidney Poitier. More than a narrative history, Making Movies Black reaches beyond the screen itself with sixty photographs, many never before published, which illustrate the mood of the time. Revealing the social impact of the classical Hollywood film, Making Movies Black is the perfect book for those interested in the changing racial climate in post-World War II American life.
