- ▶ Immigration has various distributional effects—immigration causes spatial as well as social and occupational redistribution of population.
- ▶ The population of Israel is gradually conglomerating in the center of the country. However, ethnic minorities do not follow the same course; rather, they take specific routes in the migration system. Jews and persons not classified by religion, who are densely interwoven with the Jews, tend to be concentrated in the Central district. Moslems migrate to the Jerusalem district through processes of rural-urban transition, modernization, and integration into Israeli and/or Palestinian societies. The Druze people tend to stay in the Northern district. Thus, different ethnic groups have different spatial strategies and can react in dissimilar ways to the entrance of immigrants.
- ▶ This work tries to estimate some spatial aspects of ethnic restructuring—namely, links between the entrance of immigrants from the USSR/FSU and changes in the ethnic spatial structure of the Israeli Jews.

Asian-american Education Meyer Weinberg, 2012-12-06 Asian American Education Historical Background and Current Realities fills a gap in the study of the social and historical experiences of Asians in U S schools It is the first historical work to provide American readers with information about highly individual ethnic groups rather than viewing distinctly different groups as one vague global entity such as Asians The people who populate each chapter are portrayed as active participants in their history rather than as passive victims of their culture Each of the twelve country specific chapters begins with a description of the kind of education received in the home country including how widely available it was how equal or unequal the society was and what were the circumstances under which the emigration of children from the country occurred The latter part of each of these chapters deals with the education these children have received in the United States Throughout the book instead of dwelling on a relatively narrow range of children who perform spectacularly well the author tries to discover the educational situation typical among average students The order of chapters is roughly chronological in terms of when the first sizable numbers of immigrants came from a specific country
