Breslin, 2011-11-01 An evocative and stunning photographic tribute to America's railroad stations For much of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries the railroad station or depot was the communal hub of every American town that could boast of train service There citizens gathered before they sent loved ones off to college marriage or war and where they greeted them on their return Most of these buildings were architectural gems and while many are still in service certain others now house museums banks restaurants and more In fact in cities like Washington D C and Philadelphia renovated stations are destinations unto themselves even for those not boarding the train And in other places whole sections of towns have been remade around these structures restoring their vitality in novel and interesting ways long after the last train has left the
