Rains Asia An Assessment Model For Acid Deposition In Asia:

Rains-Asia Robert J. Downing, Ramesh Ramankutty, Jitendra J. Shah, 1997-01-01 Asia's rapid economic growth has fueled a growing appetite for commercial energy which is satisfied by fossil fuels that emit pollutants. These pollutants are oxidized and transported into the atmosphere creating acidic depositions known as acid rain that can damage foliage, soils, and surface waters. At current energy consumption growth rates by the year 2000, sulfur dioxide emissions from Asia will surpass the emissions of North America and Europe combined. RAINS ASIA is an assessment tool developed by the World Bank, the Asian Development Bank, and donors to study the implications of alternative energy development strategies for air pollution and acid rain and to help identify cost-effective abatement methods. This report provides an overview of the model and some results of analyses that have been conducted as part of the RAINS ASIA program.

Acid Rain - Deposition to Recovery Peter Brimblecombe, Hiroshi Hara, Daniel Houle, Martin Novak, 2007-12-11 This book looks at the sources and composition of the atmosphere and rainfall with particular attention on acidifying components and those that affect ecosystems. It further widens the subject to look at trace metals. It includes papers on the impact of deposition on soils and forests and the recovery of the natural environment. Work on critical loads makes a contribution to understanding the degree to which deposition must be reduced to limit its impact.

Acid Rain Science and Politics in Japan Kenneth E. Wilkening, 2004-05-21 Acid Rain Science and Politics in Japan is a pioneering work in environmental and Asian history as well as an in-depth analysis of the influence of science on domestic and international environmental politics. Kenneth Wilkening's study also illuminates the global struggle to create sustainable societies. The Meiji Restoration of 1868 ended Japan's era of isolation, created self-sufficiency, and sustainability. The opening of the country to Western ideas and technology not only brought pollution problems associated with industrialization, including acid rain, but also scientific techniques for understanding and combating them. Wilkening identifies three pollution-related sustainability crises in modern Japanese history: copper mining in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, which spurred Japan's first acid rain research and policy initiatives; horrendous post-World War II domestic industrial pollution, which resulted in a hidden acid rain problem; and the present-day global problem of transboundary pollution in which Japan is a victim of imported acid rain. He traces the country's scientific and policy responses to these crises through six distinct periods related to acid rain problems and argues that Japan's leadership role in East Asian acid rain science and policy today can be explained in large part by the historical scientific momentum generated by efforts to confront the issue since 1868, reinforced by Japan's cultural affinity with rain, its culture of rain. Wilkening provides an overview of nature culture and the acid rain problem in Japan to complement the general set of concepts he develops to analyze the interface of science and politics in environmental policymaking. He concludes with a discussion of lessons from Japan's experience that can be applied to the creation of sustainable societies worldwide.

Integrated Assessment of Sustainable Energy Systems in China, The China Energy Technology Program B. Eliasson,Y. Lee,2012-12-06 The purpose of the China Energy Technology Program CETP has been to take a holistic view of electricity generation in China with special emphasis on the economic and environmental impact of technology The program is a collaborative effort involving industry as leader and manager of the program researchers from academia and national research institutes and the stakeholders users or planners of the electricity market A power plant no matter of what kind is not a solitary unit which may be considered independently from its environment Modern society has been built on easy access to power it is now asking for environmentally clean power Clean power is the pathway that will lead to sustainability an extension of the concept of an environmentally clean future Progress toward a sustainable technical solution must include an evaluation of the environmental economic and societal impact of electrical power generation To achieve the goals of the CETP program we wanted to go beyond what had been done in similar programs in the past Its organizers wanted the program not only to evaluate the overall impact of electricity generation but also do it in such a way that program results could be applied and adapted to different circumstances including countries other than China For this purpose we have developed a methodology and presented it on a DVD disc which the reader will find inside the back cover of this book The methodology is conceived to allow insights into the function of the program on various levels Economic Policies for Sustainable Development Thomas Sterner,2012-12-06 This book focuses on describing policy instruments in different countries Its purpose is not only descriptive but also to some extent advocacy We believe that economic instruments can make an important contribution to an environmentally less disruptive path of development The design of economic instruments is however a fine art and depends among other things on their political acceptability and this acceptability is of course influenced by experience It is therefore important to provide information on the use of policy instruments in other countries Policies are currently developing quite fast and thus a book such as this one can inevitably not capture more than a snapshot view at a single moment of time We would hope that the book encourages more experimentation with economic instruments and that countries will make a fuller use of the whole arsenal of economic policy instruments If the book does succeed in this sense then it will soon become dated as policies change but that would be a price well worth paying The book combines a dozen country monographs together with a few international surveys on particular topics gasoline pricing vehicle regulations acid rain deforestation and global warming These papers are intended to illustrate the diversity of policy options available The actual policies adopted depend on economic as well as ecological conditions The country studies cover two Western countries and then concentrate on formerly planned and developing countries They show that economic instruments are still generally thought of as new and innovative Air Pollution and the Forests of Developing and Rapidly

Industrializing Regions John L. Innes,Abu Hassan Haron,2000-06-27 This book examines the importance of air pollution for the forests of rapidly industrialising countries and regions Its geographical coverage includes South and Central America Africa and Asia including Siberia China and Korea The problems presented by air pollution are placed within the more general context of sustainable development within these regions and the historical legacy that they are attempting to deal with Attention is drawn to the very serious problems associated with poor air quality in cities such as Mexico City and Chongqing China Air pollution in these areas is amongst the worst in the world Several chapters examine the importance of forest fires as a source of air pollution with particular reference being made to the Southeast Asian fires in recent years The available information about the effects of this pollution on the surrounding forests is reviewed and recommendations are made for a better understanding of the impacts A final chapter reviews the recent developments in air pollution control policies in the different regions covered by the book
