This paper addresses a crucial question, namely how the practices involved in what is labeled research contribute to the reproduction of gender inequality. Through a discourse analysis of research articles on women's entrepreneurship, I show that, contrary to intentions, this research second-sexes women. I also show how this is achieved. Discussing the particular practices that bring this about, I discuss how this seemingly inevitable result may be avoided. The implications go beyond gender issues, however. They entail a challenge of the very basis of management research practices.

Theoretical and methodological departures

I depart from a social constructionist (or post-structuralist) understanding of gender. This means that there is nothing essentially masculine or feminine. These concepts are seen as socially constructed and vary in time and place. This differs from the liberal feminist view that much "women-in-management" research is based on. According to this view, what defines a human is her ability to think rationally and men and women are seen as equally well equipped with this ability. So, they are equally human. Any shortcomings with women must depend on discrimination or structural barriers. These removed, men and women would achieve equally. Liberal feminism thus assumes that men and women are "the same", but the man is the implicit norm (Calás & Smircich, 1996).

It also differs from social feminism, according to which men and women are seen as different¹. Not by birth, necessarily, but through early childhood experiences and continued socializing (Chodorow, 1988; Gilligan, 1982). Women are said to be more relational, caring and ethical than men. According to the post-structuralist view, men and women are neither similar nor different, but gender differences (and similarities) are produced in social interaction. So are gender relations. This production process, as well as the finished product, is the object of this study.

I use a discourse analytical approach, building on Foucault (1972). Foucault defined discourses as "practices which form the object of which they speak" (Foucault 1969/1972:49). Discourses have power implications in that they form what is held as knowledge, and as truth. For example, people drawing upon the discourse of "woman as a mother" might say that "there is nothing more important for children than a safe home with a caring mother". Those drawing upon the discourse of woman as a co-breadwinner might say "women should be able to support themselves financially on equal terms with men". These two discourses have different sorts of implications for the organization of social life, and for men and women. Discourses are therefore important study objects for the social sciences.

The purpose of this particular study is to analyze the discursive production of the female entrepreneur/female entrepreneurship in research texts. In line with the theory presented, research texts are not innocent, objective reflections of social reality. They are co-producers of social reality.

Management Education and Humanities Barbara Czarniawska-Joerges, 2006 Academics and managers who strive for a humanistic management education usually care for people but they are challenged by sophisticated intellectual subjects and practical problems The authors experience competence and commitment enables them to present an extensive coverage of important views and an in depth study of these issues Eduard Bonet ESADE Spain This volume is a timely initiative It

resonates with important questions on globalization and its consequences on the unrelenting quest for efficiency and productivity on recent corporate scandals and on the responsibilities of managers and management education This book is a manifesto for an intellectual revolution In a complex and open world managers often bump into the limits of the decontextualized tools associated with mainstream management knowledge and practice Managers have to navigate in a world that is not only economic but also political cultural shaped by history and ethical traditions and preoccupations not only as a mark of social capital but really as a way to enhance their managerial skills and efficiency The role of management education should be to prepare them for that odyssey and this volume tells us that humanities could be a powerful tool in that sense This project is served by a highly legitimate international panel of contributors who collectively point towards an alternative for management thinking and management education Marie Laure Djelic ESSEC Business School France Management Education and Humanities argues that management teachers and researchers seem to be increasingly dissatisfied with the way managers are usually educated in western countries It claims that educational practices and methods would greatly benefit from reflection on the implicit assumptions and paradigms behind those practices and debates the role that humanism and humanities might play in the formation of new managerial lites The book examines three themes that have emerged as central to the contemporary debate on management education the profession of management humanism as a philosophy and worldview and the humanities as an academic field where management schools could find new inspirations for curricula All three themes are scrutinized in a frame of reference extended between two different points of view the traditional view with its tendency to idealize and even sometimes romanticize humanism the humanities and management as a social function and the past modern view which is inclined to skepticism and to the deconstruction of social and cultural phenomena Providing a lively account of this ongoing debate and exploring new trends and experiences in management education this book will be invaluable reading for teachers students and researchers of management management strategy and organizational behaviour

Gender, Tourism Entrepreneurship and Social Policy Anna de Jong, Michael Zisuh Ngoasong, Albert Nsom Kimbu, 2024-11-07 This timely volume is a novel and important contribution to scholarly literature on gender and tourism entrepreneurship utilising feminist and post colonial frameworks to interrogate the role of social policies in facilitating inclusive tourism entrepreneurship Drawing on contributions and case studies from across the Global South and Global North this multi disciplinary collection identifies how regional variations in governance and policy influence the experiences and potentialities of tourism entrepreneurship as a promised avenue for inclusive growth for marginalised identities Problematizing universalised constructions of entrepreneurs as necessarily masculine western and driven only by economic imperatives that seek to fix and dislocate entrepreneurial support this volume takes focus with place based approaches to explore the intersections between identity tourism entrepreneurship and social policy It is this geographically informed perspective that seeks to account for the complexity of entrepreneurial experience and the role of social policy within this that constitutes an original contribution to the field The focus on gender and social policy reflects the increasing importance of tourism entrepreneurship within the context of the UNWTOs Sustainable Development Goals This book will be a pivotal resource for students researchers academics and policy makers in tourism gender studies development studies sustainability and business

Gender Equality from a Modern Perspective Tanusree Chakraborty,Nandita Mishra,Ashok Natarajan,Bipasha Chatterjee,2023-10-20 Attempts to eliminate or reduce gender inequality have been made by governments international organizations NGOs policymakers and private organizations However the evidence still shows that the gender gap exists from womb to tomb from parental treatment to corporate leadership and even the genders psychologically different identity for that matter The question however arises with laws and regulations formed on gender disparity bills becoming acts society becoming broader in their outlook and adopting inclusivity in terms of gender in different spheres Are we still able to claim that we are addressing gender inequality enough This volume explores the disparity between genders in terms of the labor market and career advancement child rearing practices education financial literacy work life balance pay gaps and economic development to name a few areas It focuses on the robust themes of the gender gap from a modern perspective to enhance our understanding of gender inequality in today s world
