Osiris, Volume 39 Jaipreet Viridi, Mara Mills, Sarah F. Rose, 2024-09-02 Presents a powerful new vision of the history of science through the lens of disability studies Disability has been a central if unacknowledged force in the history of science as in the scientific disciplines Across historical epistemology and laboratory research disability has been good to think with an object of investigation made to yield generalizable truths Yet disability is rarely imagined to be the source of expertise especially the kind of expertise that produces rational neutral universal scientific knowledge This volume of Osiris places disability history and the history of science in conversation to foreground disability epistemologies disabled scientists and disability sciencing engagement with scientific tools and processes Looking beyond paradigms of medicalization and industrialization the volume authors also examine knowledge production about disability from the ancient world to the present in fields ranging from mathematics to the social sciences resulting in groundbreaking histories of taken for granted terms such as impairment infirmity epidemics and sh gai Some contributors trace the disabling impacts of scientific theories and practices in the contexts of war factory labor insurance and colonialism others excavate racial and settler ableism in the history of scientific facts protocols and collections still others query the boundaries between scientific lay and disability expertise Contending that disability alters method authors bring new sources and interpretation techniques to the history of science overturn familiar narratives apply disability analyses to established terms and archives and discuss accessibility issues for disabled historians The resulting volume announces a disability history of science Best Books for Children John Thomas Gillespie, Corinne J. Naden, 1990
