perspectives on Camden's multicultural Britain through the study of British travellers and their narratives. We meet characters such as the Tudor traveller John Leland who intended to tell the peoples of England and Wales about themselves, chronicle how they came to settle the towns, villages, valleys and mountaintops they called home, record the marks they left in the landscape and celebrate the noble histories and cultures they created. Dozens, eventually hundreds of Britons shared the same passion to meet their island neighbours and relate their experiences. The individuals studied in this book include actual as well as armchair travellers and those who blurred the boundaries between them. Their letters, diaries, journals and histories range from the epic, poignant and matter of fact to the exotic, preposterous and hateful. The sources include actual and imaginative narratives and those which combined both elements. Travellers painted Britain with, in Leland's words, native colours that were rich, vibrant and above all complex. Their remarkable journeys are the story of how Britons over two centuries met, interacted and attempted or not to understand one another. Written with an eye to debates about immigration and ethnicity in today's Britain, the book emphasizes the long history of making and remaking the island's cultural mosaic. The encounter with Britain's native colours has been a burden of history and opportunity for millennia, not simply for our own times.
