Jenkins, 2011 This is a print on demand edition of a hard to find publication By preparing their families and property before an event people can reduce a disaster s impact on them and their need for first responders esp in the first 72 hours following a disaster FEMA developed a national preparedness system NPS and included community preparedness programs as part of the NPS These programs include the Citizen Corps program and its partner programs such as Fire Corps and rely on volunteers to assist first responders in local communities This testimony discusses 1 challenges FEMA faces in measuring the performance of Citizen Corps and the Ready Campaign and 2 actions FEMA has taken to develop a strategy to encompass how Citizen Corps and the Ready Campaign operate within the context of the NPS FEMA Strategic Plan United States. Federal Emergency Management Agency,2011 The past three decades have presented the emergency management community with significant challenges and conditions that have necessitated reevaluation of strategic and operational approaches to delivering emergency management services To address those challenges FEMA recognizes that the emergency management community must operate as a team which underscores the Agency s mission to support our citizens and first responders to ensure that as a Nation we work together to build sustain and improve our capability to prepare for protect against respond to recover from and mitigate all hazards FEMA is only one member of the broad national emergency management team one that includes Federal state local tribal and territorial governments private sector nongovernmental organizations faith based and community based organizations and the American public We know that the rapid pace of change in the world provides opportunities to strengthen emergency management and that conditions will continuously evolve and affect every aspect of society These factors mean FEMA must work with the public our most important partner as well as our traditional and many new partners to innovate and test new ways to achieve critical outcomes This strategic plan was developed with an understanding of contemporary practices lessons from past experience and an appreciation for what the future may bring The FEMA 2011 2014 initiatives will make FEMA a more flexible and adaptive organization capable of responding to new situations capitalizing on opportunities and quickly adjusting to changing environments The initiatives will foster greater community engagement and unity of effort and purpose among all members of the emergency management team with the goal of achieving more effective emergency management outcomes for the Nation Federal Emergency Management Agency MICHAEL K.
