

efficacy that will get the job done since that should minimize extrapulmonary side effects and pulmonary receptor desensitization. However, during asthma exacerbations, a partial agonist might not achieve full bronchodilation in an airway containing β_2 -adrenoreceptors with impaired activity due to the use of short-acting rescue β_2 -agonists (homologous desensitization) and the presence of inflammatory mediators (heterologous desensitization and functional antagonism). While a partial agonist with intrinsic efficacy comparable to albuterol's may suffice for use as an outpatient rescue medication, stronger agonists such as fenoterol¹³ should perhaps be used to treat status asthmaticus in the emergency department or intensive care unit for maximal bronchodilation. Evidence that albuterol's bronchodilating effect plateaus at a level below that of fenoterol was provided in the September issue of CHEST.¹⁴ Further study of the tailored use of individual β_2 -agonists, taking into account drug-specific properties such as duration of action and intrinsic efficacy, should optimize our use of this class of highly effective bronchodilators. Regulatory agencies should consider requiring pharmaceutical companies to characterize and report the intrinsic efficacy of β_2 -agonists to aid physicians in their rational use.

Catching Up On Sleep

The National Sleep Disorders Research Plan

Sleep disorders are remarkably common. For example, it has been estimated that 2% of women and 4% of men in this country have sleep-disordered breathing,¹ and that about 3% of these patients are now being treated. About 10% of Americans complain of chronic dissatisfaction with their sleep.² Sleep-disordered breathing, insomnia, and periodic limb movements of sleep are particularly prevalent in the fastest-growing segment of our population, the elderly.³ Narcolepsy is not rare, with an estimated prevalence twice that of multiple sclerosis. Despite a growing sleep research community, considering the frequency of these and other sleep problems, there is general agreement that the amount of sleep research being done is inadequate. It is likely that more basic issues in sleep remain uncertain than in any other field of medicine.

For this reason, the National Center on Sleep Disorders Research (NCSDR) was established within the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute (NHLBI) as a result of the National Institutes of Health (NIH) Revitalization Act of 1993. The mandate of the NCSDR is: "To conduct and support research, training, health information dissemination, and other activities with respect to sleep disorders, including biological and circadian rhythm research, basic understanding of sleep, chronobiological and other sleep related research . . . and . . . to coordinate the activities of the Center with similar activities of other federal agencies, including the other agencies of the NIH, and similar activities of other public entities and nonprofit entities."

In January, 1996, the National Sleep Disorders Research Plan, which was drafted by the Sleep Disorders Research Advisory Board, was approved by Harold
