Psychopathological and Neurological Dysfunctions Following Open-Heart Surgery R. Becker, J. Katz, M.-J. Polonius, H. Speidel, 2012-12-06 The Surgeon as a Humanist Medicine is the most humane of the sciences and the most scientific of the humanities Cardiac surgery today provides a most natural confluence for the high technology of medicine and the humanistic values traditional in the practice of medicine The cardiac surgeon must of necessity be knowledgeable in physiology and cardiology and must also possess consummate surgical technical skill The attainment of these skills over long years of training leads many of these surgeons to believe or perceive this long struggle as an apotheosis of their position in life rather than as an education in bringing the latest scientific advances to the care of patients. The problem lies not only with the cardiac surgeon; it is also contributed to by the patient's perception of heart surgery, heart disease, and the mystery of the science and physiology involved. The patient with heart disease expecting surgery may for the first time be facing the finiteness of his existence. The low risk of cardiac surgery today notwithstanding, the coronary surgery patient, most likely a type A personality, is faced with a perceived threat to his invulnerability, his self-image, his family, his independence, his control of situations, and his very existence.

Because these patients often present with violence, confusion, suicidal attempts, and bizarre behavior, and thoughts, non-psychiatric physicians often react with various degrees of discomfort and avoidance. However, it is often important to make a decision whether the presenting symptoms are due to functional or organic illness, since serious morbidity and mortality can occur in patients with acute organic brain disease. The differential diagnosis would include Functional Psychiatric Disease, Organic Disease, Affective Disorders, Delirium, Schizophrenic Disorders, Dementia, Personality Disorders, Anxiety Disorders, Adjustment Disorders. Findings which are helpful in raising the index of suspicion for organic disease are:

- a Disorientation to time and place
- b Fluctuating level of consciousness
- c Age over 45 with no previous psychiatric history
- d Abnormal autonomic signs: vital signs, pupillary responses, sweating
- e Acute onset of psychotic illness, hours to days
- f Ongoing medical disease and its treatment
- g Recognition that hallucinations and delusions are frequently observed in organic as well as functional disease
