Shotwell, Modern and Contemporary European History (Classic Reprint) Jacob Salwyn Schapiro, 2017-01-09 Excerpt from Modern and Contemporary European History The Protestant Revolution had broken up the religious monopoly Of the Catholic Church but it had by no means established religious equality or even tolera The system tion Indeed Protestant theologians like Luther of national Calvin Knox and cranmer were as insistent on churches conformity to the established religion as their Catholic opponents The fundamental principle Of the Protestant Revolution was religious independence rather than religious freedom the idea that every nation had the right to estab lish its own type Of Christianity One World one Faith had been the demand Of the Catholic In the warfare Of creeds in the seventeenth century the futility Of this ideal became apparent and a new principle one Nation one Faith took its place But as the nation had not yet attained any adequate means Of self expression the mon arch and the governing class were generally able to force upon it their own form of religion Hence it came about that the religion of the king became by law the religion Of the people and Official churches were organized to preach it This is how we get the system of established churches Toleration was the one thing that both Catholics and Protestants rejected Conformity to the national religion was the law everywhere hence nonconformists and free thinkers found themselves

persons without a country The degree Of intolerance varied with the strength Of the estab lished Church In Spain where Catholic hegemony was unchallenged heretics were still burned at the stake In England where the established Anglican Church had many opponents both Catholic and Protestant nonconformists were merely fined and imprisoned The Church particu larly in Catholic countries was very wealthy as it owned vast tracts Of land which yielded enormous revenues In addition a special tax called the tithe was levied on the people irrespective Of their religious beliefs for the benefit Of the Official religion About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Modern and Contemporary European History (1815-1921) Jacob Salwyn Schapiro, 1929
