Personal Injury and Product Liability Litigation Howard R. Reiss, 1987 Product Liability Litigation, 1986 Managing Product Liability Risks J. Wilson

McCallister, David H. Canter, 2005 In today's litigation environment manufacturers must systematically manage their product liability risks. This requires that product managers and corporate decision makers take as much interest in managing the company's product liability as they do in their initiatives to increase shareholder value. They simply cannot sit back and criticize the system while relying on past practices and antiquated legal principles. That's a recipe for disaster. Corporate executives must understand that shareholder value means little if the company is forced into bankruptcy by product litigation. Society today demands more from manufacturers than it did just a few decades ago. A systematic approach to managing product liability risks therefore begins with an appreciation of the legal principles under which products are judged and an acceptance of the fact that the rules will continue to change to meet consumer expectations. Corporate managers cannot be surprised by the civil justice system. They must understand the system and design and distribute products that conform to its requirements. In this book the authors provide corporate managers with a comprehensive look at current and developing trends in product liability law and offers practical suggestions on how to minimize the risks of litigation as product liability law continues to expand. Co-authored by David H. Canter, Partner, Harrington Foxx Dubrow Canter LLP and J. Wilson McCallister, this book provides unique insight into the exposure of a corporation to product liability litigation and offers the benefit of the authors' experience to managing this risk. This book offers unique insights from in-house to outside counsel producing advice that is workable from both sides of the practice. J. Wilson McCallister was with Deere Company in its law department for 25 years. As Associate General Counsel, he managed Deere's product litigation, early dispute resolution program and special litigation throughout the United States. David Canter, a senior partner at the Los Angeles firm of Harrington Foxx Dubrow Canter, has defended corporations in products liability litigation for 40 years. He has defended corporations in litigation in 17 state and federal courts and thus has gained wide nationwide experience. Chapters include: 1. Product Liability: The Legal Context and Trends; 2. A Systematic Approach to Managing Product Liability Exposure and Litigation; 3. A First Step: Designing to Reduce Product Accidents and Injuries; 4. The Importance of Proper Selection and Use of Expert Witnesses; 5. Striving To Be the Best Pays Off; 6. The Effective Use of Legal Counsel; 7. Early Claims Resolution Makes Sense: A Strategy; 8. Alternate Dispute Resolution is Cost Effective: A Strategy; 9. Document Retention Policy: How to Stay Out of Trouble with the Courts and Juries; 10. The Trial: It's Non-Controllable Risks and Possible Wins and Losses.

Practical Problems in Product Liability Litigation Product Liability Advisory Council (U.S.), 1990 Products Liability Litigation, 1982 Fundamentals of Product Liability Law for Engineers Linda K. Enghagen, 1992 Product liability law suits yield more million dollar plus judgments than any other class of personal injury law suits. This book provides practicing engineers, technical managers and engineering students with a basic understanding of the rules of substantive law governing product liability litigation. It offers insight into the theories of law that are used and explains the process involved in proving a lawsuit in a court of law.
