Value Driven Product Planning and Systems Engineering Harry E. Cook, Luke A. Wissmann, 2007-08-28 Engineers and scientists often need to sell an innovative idea for a new product or a new product improvement to top management Sometimes their tendency is to focus on the WOW of the new technology at the expense of making a convincing business case When the new technology represents a large cost reduction there will be much less of a problem in convincing management to approve the project if the investment level is acceptable The major rub comes when the new feature or technology is an improvement in customer value that also generates an increase in cost This makes the sell difficult in spite of the fact that many of the inventive products available today are widely used because they provide very high value in relation to their added cost Engineers and scientists also occupy product planning positions where they need to be constantly scanning ideas for improving value that come both from inside and outside the company to see if they make sense to incorporate in a future product At the same time they need to anticipate what their major competitors are likely to do to improve their next generation of product These problems are exacerbated in today's global economy because the number of competitors has increased markedly in many product segments and there are many technological alternatives available for consideration The problem of anticipating the moves of your major competitor is particularly challenging because most firms keep plans very secure The engineer as product planner must learn to think like its major competitor using customer value as a guide Value Driven Product Planning and Systems Engineering provides essential support for engineers and scientists who are required to make realistic business cases for new innovative product concepts

MUKHOPADHYAY, 2015-02-26 This comprehensive and up to date text now in its Third Edition describes how the latest techniques in production planning and control are applied to contemporary industrial setups so as to meet the ever increasing demands in industrial organizations for better quality of services for faster delivery of products and for adapting to the rapid changes taking place in the industrial scenario With the demands in the industrial arena increasingly tending to be lumpy the most effective strategy for planning and controlling production processes cannot be a static preconceived one Instead it is one that is flexible and is capable of adapting to the erratic changes in demand patterns Evolving such a strategy requires more of practical skill than mere theoretical knowledge of the subject This book explores the demands of the present day industrial environment and the techniques for addressing these demands through a number of case studies drawn from Indian industries The efficacy of various planning strategies the methods for implementing them and their suitability for different industries have been clearly explained in relation to these cases While the essentials of theory have been covered in a simple and straightforward style the stress is on developing the practical skills required to tackle the unpredictable problems and the unforeseen demands that pose a formidable challenge to modern industries The book places emphasis as much on the principles of heuristic techniques as on the systematic approach to production planning This book would serve as a useful textbook to postgraduate students of management as well as undergraduate students of industrial engineering It will be equally useful to the teaching community and the practicing professionals

NEW TO THE THIRD EDITION Includes a new chapter on Leagile Manufacturing A Contemporary Manufacturing Syndrome Chapter 11 Provides several references to explore more in the field
