Food Law Handbook Harold Schultz, 2012-12-06 Of all industries in the United States the food industry must in fact be the most regulated by law If it is not its competition for this distinction goes unnoticed All phases of the food industry are subjected to some control by law beginning with the land food is grown on and the oceans from which it is harvested Seed and plant stock are sometimes subjected to control such as to the nutritional value of the foods they produce Acreages of agricultural crops the quantities of foods to be produced are regulated As foods are produced whether from plants or animals the substances applied to increase yields or provide protection from pests are controlled to insure safe use As foods enter and pass through the huge marketing system they are scrutinized from beginning to end by regulatory agents operating under authority of food laws Those foods which are transformed through various technologies into today's thousands of consumer products are watched carefully to insure the appropriateness and safety of added ingredients not all of which are natural and the adequacy of processing packaging and storage Finally the representation of foods to consumers through labeling and advertising is controlled to make sure it is accurate and sufficiently informative

Schröder, 2013-03-09 Consumer markets for foods and beverages in developed countries are well supplied and highly fragmented Yet the question being asked is how close retailers actually come to fulfilling their customers requirements The concept of consumer value is one of the main pillars underpinning the theory of market differentiation This book takes an interdisciplinary approach to the analysis of satisfaction in relation to the consumption of food with both food science and consumer science playing central parts It approaches food quality from both the technical and the consumer satisfaction perspectives and assesses the roles of management and regulatory tools in delivering food quality for all Each area is discussed in detail using the appropriate technical terminology but keeping the text accessible to readers from both academic traditions as well as to non specialist readers Congressional Record Index, 1977 Includes history of bills and resolutions Food Choice And The Consumer David Marshall, David W. processes This collection focuses on this relationship between law and food and takes us far beyond their mere interaction to explore different ways of using these two apparently so diverse elements to describe different phenomena of the legal reality The authors use the link between food and law to describe different aspects of the legal landscape in different areas and jurisdictions Bringing together metaphors and indirect correlations between law and food the book explores different models of approaching legal issues and considering different legal challenges from a completely new perspective in line with the multidisciplinary approach that leads comparative legal studies today and to a certain extent revisiting and enriching it With contributions in English and French the book will be of interest to academics and researchers working in the areas of law and food law and language and comparative legal studies
