

A search of the database Federal Research in Progress identified current nursing research projects funded by the Department of Veterans Affairs, including one that was not initiated. A broad scope of topics was covered, including responses to touch, various aspects of mental disorders, biological rhythms in intensive care patients, roles and competencies of nurses, and comparative studies of selected nursing techniques.

STUDIES FUNDED BY THE TRISERVICE NURSING RESEARCH PROGRAM

The committee closely examined the content of abstracts of the 77 research proposals that were funded by the TSNR Program during the fiscal year (FY) 1992 through FY 1995. References for these studies are listed in Appendix D, and the complete abstracts are given in the companion publication Military Nursing Research: Bibliographies (IOM, 1996). To develop an understanding of the scope and types of studies that received funding, the abstracts were analyzed in two ways: by examining (1) the distribution of grants among priority areas identified by the TSNR Program in its annual Request for Proposals and (2) characteristics of the studies. Because military populations are very diverse culturally, the committee also examined the abstracts for attention to this topic.

Distribution of TSNR Program Awards by Priority Areas

Priority areas for the TSNR Program are listed in Table 3-4 for 1992 and 1993, in Table 3-5 for 1994, and in Table 3-6 for 1995, along with the number of projects and total funding in each priority area. The committee categorized the abstracts since this information was not available from the program. Over the first 2 years of the program, with $1 million in funding during FY 1992 and $2 million in FY 1993, grants were distributed unevenly among the five priority areas, with two areas receiving no awards (Table 3-4). The major area funded was health care delivery. Seven grants out of 30 (totaling nearly 20 percent of the total budget of $3 million) appeared to the committee to fall outside priority areas.

In 1994, with its budget increased to $3 million, the TSNR Program listed 10 priority areas and specified that research applying to the military would be given highest priority. As shown in Table 3-5, the priority area "Evaluation of nursing/women's health programs/deployment" received the largest dollar value of the awards, followed by the area "Application of clinical nursing to a military environment." The committee's categorization indicated that 4 of the 10 priority areas designated in 1994 received no grants and that 25 percent of the awards,
