The Internet and Governance in Asia Indrajit Banerjee,2007 This book constitutes a first ever attempt to map the impact of the Internet on governance in Asia It examines key implications for democratization cyber security e government technical coordination and Internet policy and regulation The book is divided into five sections Internet and Democracy ways in which the Internet has been harnessed to promote greater democratization public debate and political participation E Government the provision of services through the Internet and other ICT networks and its impact on public accountability and transparency Cyber Security the critical issues and concerns such as surveillance as well as the means by which the Internet can be effectively used to improve security as well as minimize risks from terrorism Internet Governance critical issues relating to the technical coordination of the Internet and the prospects for the best possible means to govern the structure and operations of the Internet and Internet Policy and Regulation key policy and regulatory issues and concerns relating to the use and impact of the Internet The three chapters in each of the sections provide a diversity of perspectives covering each of the specific issues addressed by the section The idea here is to provide readers with different perspectives and case studies on the same issue Asian Media Information and Communication Centre AMIC series is available exclusively from ISEAS for worldwide distribution

Missed Information David Sarokin,Jay Schulkin,2017-09-01 How better information and better access to it improves the quality of our decisions and makes for a more vibrant participatory society Information is power It drives commerce protects nations and forms the backbone of systems that range from health care to high finance Yet despite the avalanche of data available in today s information age neither institutions nor individuals get the information they truly need to make well informed decisions Faulty information and sub optimal decision making create an imbalance of power that is exaggerated as governments and corporations amass enormous databases on each of us Who has more power the government in possession of uncounted terabytes of data some of it obtained by cybersnooping or the ordinary citizen trying to get in touch with a government agency In Missed Information David Sarokin and Jay Schulkin explore information not information technology but information itself as a central part of our lives and institutions They show that providing better information and better access to it improves the quality of our decisions and makes for a more vibrant participatory society Sarokin and Schulkin argue that freely flowing information helps systems run more efficiently and that incomplete information does just the opposite It s easier to comparison shop for microwave ovens than for doctors or hospitals because of information gaps that hinder the entire health care system Better information about such social ills as child labor and pollution can help consumers support more sustainable products The authors examine the opacity of corporate annual reports the impenetrability of government secrets and emerging techniques of information foraging The information imbalance of power can be reconfigured they argue with greater and more meaningful transparency from government and corporations
