Colonies

Ants are social insects and live in colonies. One colony can include millions of ants. Most ants live in nests made from soil, twigs, wood and leaves. Nests can be found above or below the ground, beneath rocks or in trees. After mating with a drone, a queen lays eggs. She can produce hundreds of eggs each day. Other females are known as worker ants. It is their job to find food, maintain the nest and care for the young. Larger females are called soldiers and they protect the colony.

Quick Facts

Name	Ant
Scientific Name	Formicidae
Location	Worldwide except Antarctica, Greenland, Iceland and some islands.
Lifespan	Several weeks to several years.
Conservation Status	Some species are endangered.

Food

Ants are omnivores and what they eat depends upon their species. Nectar, leaves, fungus, fruit and vegetables are commonly eaten. Some ants eat hemolymph, a sweet substance produced by aphids (so tiny insects). Other ants may eat insects and their eggs, as well as amphibians, reptiles and small mammals. They use their antennae to help them detect food.

Ants are insects and a type of invertebrate. They are found in most places around the world but are most common in warmer climates. There are over 10,000 species.

Appearance

Ants can reach up to 2.5cm (1 inch) in length. Colours of ants include yellow, red, brown and black. Their bodies have three sections: the head, the thorax and the abdomen. Their head is large with two antennae on the top. The legs are attached to the thorax and the vital organs are within the abdomen. Only female males (drones) and fertile females (queens) have wings. Ants have two sets of jaws called mandibles. These are used to kill prey and to carry food and nest materials.
