Macroeconomics European Approach:

Macroeconomics Michael Parkin, 2005 European Approaches to International Relations Theory Jörg

Friedrichs, 2004-03-01 A well established community of American scholars has long dominated the discipline of international relations. Recently however certain strands of continental theorizing are being introduced into the mainstream. This is a critical examination of European approaches to international relations theory suggesting practical ways of challenging mainstream thought. Friedrichs presents a detailed sociological analysis of knowledge production in existing European IR communities namely France, Italy and Scandinavia. He also discusses a selection of European schools and approaches. The Current State of Macroeconomics C. Usabiaga-Ibáñez, 1999-07-30 The book sets out to show the current state of macroeconomics from three main perspectives: methodology, theory and economic policy. It is built on extensive conversation with some of the world's leading macroeconomists. These are based on wide questionnaires covering jointly almost all the topics of macroeconomic theory as well as questions of methodology, real economy and even academic systems and future lines of research. Some of the questions have been put to all the respondents or many of them with the aim of bringing out their different positions. References about authors and themes are also provided. Model Building in Economics

Lawrence A. Boland, 2014 Concern about the role and the limits of modeling has heightened after repeated questions were raised regarding the dependability and suitability of the models that were used in the run up to the 2008 financial crash. In this book Lawrence Boland provides an overview of the practices of and the problems faced by model builders to explain the nature of models, the modeling process and the possibility for and nature of their testing. In a reflective manner the author raises serious questions about the assumptions and judgments that model builders make in constructing models. In making his case he examines the traditional microeconomics/macroeconomics separation with regard to how theoretical models are built and used and how they interact, paying particular attention to the use of equilibrium concepts in macroeconomic models and game theory and to the challenges involved in building empirical models, testing models and using models to test theoretical explanations. European Economics at a Crossroads John Barkley Rosser, Richard P. F. Holt, David C.

Colander, 2010-01-01 As Europe moves toward an integrated academic system, European economics is changing. This book discusses that change along with the changes that are happening simultaneously within the economics profession. The authors argue that modern economics can no longer usefully be described as neoclassical but is much better described as complexity economics. The complexity approach embraces rather than assumes away the complexities of social interaction. The authors also argue that despite all the problems with previous European academic structures, those structures allowed for more diversity than exists in US universities and thus were often ahead of US universities in exploring new cutting edge approaches. The authors further argue that by trying to judge themselves by US-centric measures and to copy US universities, the European economics profession is undermining some of the strengths of the older system, strengths on which it should be building While the authors agree that European economics needs to go through major changes in the coming decade they argue that by building on Europe's strengths rather than trying to follow a US example Europe will be more likely to become the global leader in economics in the coming decades rather than a second rate copy of the US The book begins with two chapters spelling out the authors view of the changes in economics and European economics This is followed by 11 interviews with a diverse set of innovative European economists from a range of European countries In the interviews these European economists reflect on the ongoing changes in economics generally and in European economics specifically These interviews demonstrate how the economics profession is moving away from traditional neoclassical economics into a dynamic set of new methods and approaches incorporating work in behavioral economics experimental economics evolutionary game theory and ecological approaches complexity and nonlinear dynamics methodological analysis and agent based modelling that the authors classify as complexity economics This fascinating and easy to read book will prove a stimulating and thought provoking read for those with an interest in economics European education and the nature of academic disciplines generally
