Bioarchaeology of Impairment and Disability Jennifer F. Byrnes, Jennifer L. Muller, 2017-06-28 Over the years impairment has been discussed in bioarchaeology with some scholars providing carefully contextualized explanations for their causes and consequences Such investigations typically take a case study approach and focus on the functional aspects of impairments However these interpretations are disconnected from disability theory discourse Other social sciences and the humanities have far surpassed most of anthropology with the exception of medical anthropology in their integration of social theories of disability This volume has three goals The first goal of this edited volume is to present theoretical and methodological discussions on impairment and disability The second goal of this volume is to emphasize the necessity of interdisciplinarity in discussions of impairment and disability within bioarchaeology The third goal of the volume is to present various methodological approaches to quantifying impairment in skeletonized and mummified remains This volume serves to engage scholars from many disciplines in our exploration of disability in the past with particular emphasis on the bioarchaeological context

Care in the Past Lindsay Powell, William Southwell-Wright, Rebecca Gowland, 2016-11-30 Care giving is an activity that has been practiced by all human societies From the earliest societies through to the present all humans have faced choices regarding how people in positions of dependency are to be treated As such care giving and the form it takes is a central experience of being a human and one that is culturally mediated Archaeology has tended to marginalise the study of care and debates surrounding our ability to recognise it within the archaeological record have often remained implicit rather than a focus of discussion These 12 papers examine the topic of care in past societies and specifically how we might recognise the provision of care in archaeological contexts and to open up an inter disciplinary conversation including historical bioarchaeological faunal and philosophical perspectives The topic of care is examined through three different strands the provision of care throughout the life course namely that provided to the youngest and oldest members of a society care giving and attitudes towards impairment and disability in prehistoric and historic contexts and the role of animals as both recipients of care and as tools for its provision

Martin Wobst, 2004-11-10 With case studies from North America to Australia and South Africa and covering topics from archaeological ethics to the repatriation of human remains this book charts the development of a new form of archaeology that is informed by indigenous values and agendas This involves fundamental changes in archaeological theory and practice as well as substantive changes in the power relations between archaeologists and indigenous peoples Questions concerning the development of ethical archaeological practices are at the heart of this process Palaeopathology and Evolutionary Medicine Kimberly A. Plomp, Charlotte A. Roberts, Sarah Elton, Gilian R. Bentley, 2022 The volume aims to encourage more co produced research addressing questions about human health past and present by scholars working in evolutionary medicine EM and palaeopathology It highlights future research that may promote that collaboration between palaeopathology and EM This chapter starts with the premise that EM and palaeopathology have clear synergies in that they take a deep time perspective as they explore health in the past and in the present It introduces the volume and first provides a background to evolutionary medicine from its first appearance in the early 1990s including discussions about ultimate and proximate explanations for disease It then highlights that the field of palaeopathology was initially established much earlier than EM and it is argued that practitioners before the 1990s often physicians were simply not exposed to evolutionary theory in relation to the diseases they were seeing both in the living and in the dead However the stage now looks set for more productive collaborations A thematic overview of the volume and its individual chapters follows within the framework of the suggested categories for study within EM Williams and Nesse 1990 The chapter finishes with some discussion about the One Health initiative EM and palaeopathology an initiative that is considered an essential area of study now and into the future

The Oxford Handbook of Childhood and Education in the Classical World Judith Evans Grubbs, Tim Parkin, 2013-11-12 The past thirty years have seen an explosion of interest in Greek and Roman social history particularly studies of women and the family Until recently these studies did not focus especially on children and childhood but considered children in the larger context of family continuity and inter family relationships or legal issues like legitimacy adoption and inheritance Recent publications have examined a variety of aspects related to childhood in ancient Greece and Rome but until now nothing has attempted to comprehensively survey the state of ancient childhood studies This handbook does just that showcasing the work of both established and rising scholars and demonstrating the variety of approaches to the study of childhood in the classical world In thirty chapters with a detailed introduction and envoi The Oxford Handbook of Childhood and Education in the Classical World presents current research in a wide range of topics on ancient childhood including sub disciplines of Classics that rarely appear in collections on the family or childhood such as archaeology and ancient medicine Contributors include some of the foremost experts in the field as well as younger up and coming scholars Unlike most edited volumes on childhood or the family in antiquity this collection also gives attention to the late antique period and whether or how conceptions of childhood and the life of children changed with Christianity The chronological spread runs from archaic Greece to the later Roman Empire fifth century C E Geographical areas covered include not only classical Greece and Roman Italy but also the eastern Mediterranean The Oxford Handbook of Childhood and Education in the Classical World engages with perennially valuable questions about family and education in the ancient world while providing a much needed touchstone for research in the field Disability and the Academic Job Market Christopher McGunnigle, 2022 Disability and the Academic Job Market examines ableist structures in academia that inherently create obstacles to full time employment for people with a disability Based on historical and contemporary scholarship it has been shown how disclosure of a disability can have profound repercussions for a scholar with a disability Scholars with a disability are often inhibited from applying to or being promoted in academia because of direct discrimination negative perception towards people with a disability inaccessible physical and performance conditions and social models of disability that characterize disability as unproductive abnormal and risky While scholarship has addressed ableism in academia it has not strongly focused on the specific difficulties and barriers that a person with a disability faces when applying for a full time academic position This book seeks to provide a resource that brings to light ableist conditions in the academic hiring process through the lived experiences of scholars with a disability with hope to implement change in these situations This collection presents a combination of personal narrative and scholarship from academics with a disability who have navigated the academic job market with additional contributions from non disabled allies who have advocated for change in academic structures Our collection begins by expressing the concerned experiences of students entering the academic job market followed by scholars who have more fully lived through the obstacles of the academic market in both contingent and tenure track positions A vital focus of this collection is on intersectionality as chapters draw from interactions between disability and race gender and sexuality across international contexts Important topics discussed throughout the collection include systemic ableism disclosure the job interview academic workaholism and lack of accommodations
