Rhetorics and Politics in Afghan Traditional Storytelling Margaret A. Mills, 2017-01-30 This book presents an ethnopoetic translation and an interpretation of an evening of story telling which took place in rural Afghanistan in 1975 Three years before the Marxist coup two Muslim elders from Herat province were asked by a Marxist subgovernor to spend an evening telling traditional stories to an American woman The storytellers wittily integrated themes of sense and nonsense gender and sexuality religion and public and private social control in thirteen recorded stories here translated in full In interpreting texts Margaret A Mills argues for a rhetorical sophistication among adept traditional performers which enables them to mount performances of traditional materials which are highly and in this case slyly sensitive to the political and social identities of self and audience Such identities are in part negotiated and constructed via the performances Noting that Afghan culture has traditionally posited noninstitutional religious authority against central government institutions Mills points out certain ironies and tensions which recur as the stories unfold in the presence of the government bureaucrat Using this evening of stories as an example the author asserts that the creation of narrative meaning makes use of both intertextual and interpersonal relationships This extended performance suggests Afghan perspectives on the integration of narrative and social critique of religious authority and private ethics of the real and the fantastic the serious and the ludicrous which challenge common western notions about genres of literary production written and oral and social interaction Television

The Boundaries of Afghans' Political Imagination Jolanta Sierakowska-Dyndy, 2014-08-11 In this book The Boundaries of Afghans Political Imagination the author seeks an answer to the question of how tradition specifically its normative axiological aspects shapes the political attitudes and actions of the Afghans The author points to two different concepts of social order which are moulded by the Pashtunwali on the one hand a tribal code which is part of Pashto language tradition and on the other hand by Sufism the religious and philosophical current in Islam expressed mainly in the Dari Persian language The two systems offer a different hierarchy of values and organize social reality by referring to two different models of order the circle and the pyramid While making an in depth analysis of the topic the author asserts that the social organization of the Pashtuns is based on the principle of representation and consensus Tribalism is shaped in the structure of a circle in which a group is the fundamental category Where tribal structure no longer performs its regulatory and organizational functions the pattern of social order is offered by the Sufi Brotherhoods which had long been very popular and powerful in this part of Asia The hierarchical organization of Sufism based on a disciple master relationship and the principle of authoritarianism gradually established the structure of the pyramid as a model of social order and also of political order Religious Sufi Brotherhoods became the most accessible leadership pattern besides the tribal one to be fixed in the Afghans social imagination This analysis from the perspective of sociocultural and political anthropology will be indispensable for those interested in Afghan and Islamic societies

South Asian Folklore in Transition Frank J. Korom, Leah K. Lowthorp, 2020-05-21 The Indian Subcontinent has been at the centre of folklore inquiry since the 19th century yet while much attention was paid to India by early scholars folkloristic interest in the region waned over time until it virtually disappeared from the research agendas of scholars working in the discipline of folklore and folklife This fortunately changed in the 1980s when a newly energized group of younger scholars who were interested in a variety of new approaches that went beyond the textual interface returned to folklore as an untapped resource in South Asian Studies This comprehensive volume further reinvigorates the field by providing fresh studies and new models both for studying the lore and the life of everyday people in the region as well as their engagement with the world at large By bringing Muslims material culture diasporic horizons global interventions and politics to bear on South Asian folklore studies the authors hope to stimulate more dialogue across theoretical and geographical borders to infuse the study of the Indian Subcontinent's cultural traditions with a new sense of relevance that will be of interest not only to areal specialists but also to folklorists and anthropologists in general This book was originally published as a special issue of South Asian History and Culture

Grand Theory in Folkloristics Lee Haring, 2016-09-19 Essays arguing diverse positions on the concept of a grand theory in American folklore Why is there no Grand Theory in the study of folklore Talcott Parsons 1902-1979 advocated grand theory which put the analysis of social phenomena on a new track in the broadest possible terms Not all sociologists or folklorists accept those broad terms some still adhere to the empirical level Through a forum sponsored by the American Folklore Society the diverse answers to the question of such a theory arrived at substantial agreement American folklorists have produced little grand theory One speaker even found all the theory folklorists need in the history of philosophy The two women in the forum Noyes and Mills spoke in defense of theory that is local apt suited to the audience and humble the men Bauman and Fine reached for something Parsons might have recognized The essays in this collection developed from the forum presentations defend diverse positions but they largely accept the longstanding concentration in American folkloristics on the quotidian and local
