Transactional Culture in Colonial Dakar, 1902-44 Rachel M. Petrocelli, 2024
Examines Dakar's transformation from a small colonial capital to a dynamic city highlighting how its resourceful residents challenged French control by forging adaptive economic relationships During a transformative era in the first half of the twentieth century Dakar former capital of French West Africa and present day capital of Senegal evolved from a small colonial capital meant to serve the French administration to a dynamic city shaped not solely by colonial planners but also by its resourceful inhabitants In this important book historian Rachel Petrocelli introduces the concept of transactional culture a set of norms and practices forged by Dakar's residents to navigate life under colonial rule A central element of that culture was transience a defining feature permeating various facets of life in Dakar from commerce and employment to housing and interactions with the state The book uncovers a central dynamic economic relationships in Dakar were continually molded by the ebb and flow of diverse individuals each pursuing their own objectives despite the relentless efforts of the French state to exert control Both Europeans and Africans embraced adaptability in Dakar over fixed residence while immigrant communities implanted themselves and became integral to the city's transactional culture In this examination based on court records and other sources Petrocelli shows that as the French colonial state sought to shape and control Dakar it enacted policies to intentionally limit city dwellers resources Strategies like pawning possessions and taking out credit creatively devising housing and mobilizing identities and affiliations emerged as a result integrating Dakarais of every background These practices persisted long after French rule ended underscoring the enduring impact of Dakar's colonial history

Dynamics of Biodiversity and Human Carrying Capacity in the Senegal Sahel Patrick Joseph González,1997 The Gambia-Senegal Border Mariama Khan,2019-05-22 This book interrogates the validity of longstanding claims that Gambians and Senegalese are one people in two countries and explores how that claim intersects with the politics and development needs of the two countries Half a century after independence proponents of Senegambian unification continue to campaign on the basis of the longstanding social cultural and religious ties between

Africa's smallest country The Gambia and Senegal the much larger country which almost entirely encircles it The border between the two former British and French colonies remains one of the starkest examples of colonial geographical bartering and it continues to serve a dual function as a bridge and a barrier in the social political and economic relations of the two countries The book investigates how the two states are constantly pulled between impulses of cooperation and de escalation and a competitive intimacy that disregards kinship ties and re activates tensions In particular the book shows how these interstate dynamics play out across the border itself where indigenous ideas of relatedness are reflected in the cross border transport and trade sectors and in the religious networks that straddle the two countries This book's skilful exploration of intersecting macro level and micro level relations in the Senegambia region will be of interest to scholars of African politics regional studies international development and border studies
