

EUROPEAN RURAL AREA AND THE CONCEPT OF RURAL DEVELOPMENT. INTERDISCIPLINARY PERSPECTIVES¹

Claudiu Gabriel BONACIU²

Abstract. The rural space is not a material and uniform space. Uniformity can be considered in two aspects: the first is related to physical space - topography, basement, soil and microclimate; the second refers to demography - density, polarization from small communities to large urban areas. Through this article, we propose a conceptual analysis of rural Europe from the perspective of five disciplines: historical, geographical, sociological, political and functional economic. The purpose of this conceptual analysis, in which the literature has been used, is to understand the evolution of European rural space and rural development in the context of the transformations to which it has been subjected

The historical perspective on the rural space

An investigation of the European rural area in general, of rural development in particular, from a historical perspective is a great challenge, an area of interest whose roots can be found in all historical periods.

In the opinion of the French historian Emmanuel Le Roy Ladurie, rural civilization is first and foremost the product of a history. He proposes a stratigraphic history, developing this concept based on the specific contributions that rural civilization receives from each century or group of centuries and from each millennium (Le Roy Ladurie, 2020).

Historians concerned with the history of Europe, the evolution of civilizations in rural Europe notice first a development, as was natural, of primitive forms of organization influenced by climate change to which the European continent has been subjected. Among them are Jean Carpentier and François Lebrun who attach special importance to the way of life of people without history. At the beginning of the tenth millennium, the last hunter-gatherers change their living conditions and living environment according to the rate at which the cold decreases in intensity, a process that varies by region. Europeans have continued to hunt for fish since then, evolving their equipment while still maintaining their traditional techniques of subsistence. In this context, according to the French modernist historian Jean Carpentier, in the European space, on the territory now owned by Ireland, England, North Germany, Scandinavia, Poland, Russia, new areas of superior civilization appear in socio-economic terms. Certain groups, well adapted to the environment, which live isolated from dynamic areas, are maintained until the fifth century BC. and sometimes

The European Neighbourhood Policy in a Comparative Perspective Sieglinde Gstohl, 2016-07-22 The European Neighbourhood Policy ENP has evolved into one of the European Union's major foreign policy instruments and received considerable attention. However, other EU neighbourhood policies and their relevance for the ENP also require examination. The Arab uprisings, civil wars in Libya and Syria, the continuing Israeli-Palestinian conflict, the crisis in Ukraine and Russia's annexation of the Crimean peninsula have all brought the institutional design and tools of the ENP into question, and a comparative perspective is crucial to understand EU neighbourhood policies in a wider sense. This timely book puts the ENP into context by exploring the major challenges and key lessons of the EU's other policy frameworks with neighbouring countries. Mapping the EU's bi-lateral and multilateral neighbourhood relations in comparison to the ENP and investigating the major challenges faced, it provides a comprehensive up-to-date view of the EU's relations with its neighbours. Focusing on current affairs and future challenges, the comparison with the ENP and the lessons to be drawn generate novel insights into the EU's closest external relations. This book will be of key interest to students and scholars studying European Politics, policies and comparative politics

Routledge International Handbook of Rural Studies Mark Shucksmith, David L. Brown, 2016-05-20 Rural societies around the world are changing in fundamental ways both at their own initiative and in response to external forces. The Routledge International Handbook of Rural Studies examines the organisation and transformation of rural society in more developed regions of the world, taking an interdisciplinary and problem-focused approach. This volume is organised around eight emerging social, economic and environmental challenges: Demographic change, Economic transformations, Food systems and land, Environment and resources, Changing configurations of gender and rural society, Social and economic equality, Social dynamics and institutional capacity, Power and governance. Cross-cutting these challenges are the growing interdependence of rural and urban, the rise in inequality within and between places, the impact of fiscal crisis on rural societies, neoliberalism, power and agency, and rural areas as potential sites of resistance.
