Managing Local Services George A. Follow the Money Duncan Campbell-Smith, 2008-03-27 Most books on politics and government take a view from the top down They focus on the individuals and institutions that set policies in place and make the laws But how are these policies and laws translated into action on the ground where their success or failure helps determine the day to day running of schools and hospitals police forces and councils This is the much less familiar territory explored by Follow The Money It tells the story of the men and women responsible for keeping track of the money spent locally on public services since the early 1980s What emerges is a rare behind the scenes account of the political world in which central government edicts come up against the reality of how things are made to happen at the grass roots Follow The Money shows how the Commission has helped over 25 years to transform the management of public services including the NHS while mediating in an often tense relationship between central and local government from the Thatcher era to the years of New Labour The result encompassing a string of scandals and battles between town hall and Whitehall is a compelling narrative for which an accounting qualification is most certainly not required of local governance service delivery in particular The paper presents the development project origins of the LGDF beginning in the 1980s comparatively examines LGDF s strengths and weaknesses and provides a step by step discussion of its utilization Four developing countries in which the LGDF has been applied serve as examples The LGDF involves first the establishment of performance benchmarks for the priority functions of the local government Second local officials and community stakeholders come together to collaboratively assess and score progress toward achieving the benchmarks Third local officials working with stakeholders develop action plans for achieving priority objectives Finally the process is regularly repeated to identify areas of improvement and future capacity building needs Successful implementation of the LGDF we conclude requires leadership well aligned political incentives proper design and implementation and dedication to the process Yet it has withstood the test of time and proven to be an effective tool for bringing government together with the community to achieve local development objectives

Dilemmas in Public Management in Greater China and Australia Andrew Podger, Hon S. Chan, Tsai-tsu Su, John Wanna, 2023-07-12 This book draws on more than a decade of workshops organised by the Greater China Australia Dialogue on Public Administration involving scholars and practitioners from Mainland China Hong Kong Taiwan and Australia Although these workshops recognised the major differences in the institutional frameworks of these jurisdictions until recently they focused largely on the shared challenges and the diffusion of ideas and approaches As rising international tensions inevitably draw attention to areas where interests and philosophies diverge it is the differences that must now be highlighted Yet despite the tensions this book reveals that these jurisdictions continue to address shared challenges in public administration The book s contributors focus in detail on these four areas 1 intergovernmental relations including the shifting balance between centralisation and decentralisation 2 budgeting and financial management including during and after the COVID 19 pandemic 3 the civil service its capability and its relationship with government and the public 4 service delivery particularly in health and aged care This book is aimed at a wide readership not only at those within the jurisdictions it explores It emphasises the importance of continued engagement in understanding different approaches to public administration confirming fundamental philosophical differences where necessary but also looking for common ground and opportunities for shared learning
