

METHODOLOGY

The methodology used to determine the 2019 Top 100 Global Innovators was developed by Thomson Reuters and approved by several IP-serving external organizations. While the final methodology is proprietary, we recognize the need for a deeper explanation of how the list was compiled.

The following is a closer look at the data used and how it was calculated and analyzed. Thomson Reuters Docket Watch® Patent Index™ (DWPI™), Docket Watch® Citation Index™, Quadrilateral Patent Index™, and Thomson Innovation®, the IP intelligence and collaboration platform, were utilized in our research and analysis. Comparative analysis was done using the Thomson Reuters Eikon platform, the single source for financial professionals to turn information into action.

The criteria for the Top 100 Global Innovator award are:

1. SUCCESS

Patenting an invention through one or more patent offices is expensive. Not all patent applications pass through the examination process and are granted. The success metric measures the ratio of published applications (those patents which are filed and publicly published by the patent office but not yet granted) to granted patents over the most recent three years.

2. GLOBAL

Protecting an invention in major world markets is an indication of the significant value a company places on its intellectual property. The number of “innovative” patents that have quadrilateral patents in their patent families, according to the Thomson Reuters Quadrilateral Patent Index, was calculated to create a ratio that shows which companies place a high value on their portfolios in major world markets. The quadrilateral patent authorities is comprised of the Chinese Patent Office, the European Patent Office, the Japanese Patent Office and the United States Patent and Trademark Office.

3. INFLUENCE

The impact of an invention “down the line” can be determined by looking at how often it is subsequently cited by other companies in their inventions. Through the Thomson Reuters Docket Watch® Citation Index database, we counted citations to each organization’s patents over the most recent five years, excluding self-citations, and put a weighted value on this measurement of ICRs.

4. VOLUME

This award focuses on companies that are responsible for generating a sizeable amount of innovation. All organizations with 100 or more “innovative” patents from the most recent three years were included in our analysis. An “innovative” patent is defined as the first publication in a patent document of a new technology, drug, business process, etc. In DWPI, these are called “basic” patents. DWPI provides a record of patents published by nearly 50 patent issuing authorities worldwide to create a comprehensive picture of the innovation landscape. Subsequent filings for the same invention are recorded as “improvements” in DWPI and called out in “patent families” and, for this analysis, were not included.

“Innovation is the primary source of economic growth, job creation and competitiveness in today’s global economy. An efficiently operating intellectual property system is critical to our ability to spur innovation and bring new services and products to the marketplace faster.”

Innovation Policy in the Knowledge-Based Economy M.P. Feldman, Albert N. Link, 2012-12-06 Scholars in the science and technology field have not collectively questioned much less proposed an agenda for policy makers Now is an appropriate time for such an undertaking First there is a growing belief that the U S national research and development system like that of many industrial nations is changing due to global competitive pressures and advancements in information technology and electronic commerce Second industry's R D relationship with the academic research community is changing not only because of the global competition but also because of alterations in the level of government support of fundamental research As a result policy makers will need to rethink their approaches to science and technology issues This volume is a collection of essays by scholars about innovative policy in the knowledge based economy By knowledge based economy we mean one for which economic growth is based on the creation distribution and use of technology As such innovation policy in such an economy must enhance the creation distribution and use of knowledge that leads to the creation distribution and use of technology This volume considers elements of an innovation policy innovation policy and academic research innovation policy in electronic commerce and innovation policy and globalization issues America Unrivaled G. John Ikenberry, 2002 American power today is without historical precedent dominating the world system No other nation has enjoyed such formidable advantages in military economic technological cultural and political capabilities How stable is this unipolar American order Will the age old dynamic of the balance of power reemerge as the other great powers rise up to challenge

American preeminence America Unrivaled examines these questions The experts in this volume contend that full scale balancing in this new world order has not yet occurred They ask if a backlash against American dominance is just around the corner or if characteristics of the current situation alter or eliminate the entire logic of power balancing American power poses threats as do the likely responses to that power the experts argue in America Unrivaled The definition of these threats is critical to understanding future political trends and learning whether an original and stable world system has already come into existence Most of the contributors agree that novel features of the American hegemony and the wider global order make an automatic return to a traditional balance of power order unlikely America's Strategic Choices, revised edition

Michael E. Brown,Owen R. Cote, Jr.,Sean M. Lynn-Jones,Steven E. Miller,2000-07-18 Contending perspectives on the future of US grand strategy More than a decade has passed since the end of the Cold War but the United States has yet to reach a consensus on a coherent approach to the international use of American power The essays in this volume present contending perspectives on the future of U S grand strategy U S policy options include primacy cooperative security selective engagement and retrenchment This revised edition includes additional and more recent analysis and advocacy of these options The volume includes the Clinton administration s National Security Strategy for a New Century the most recent official statement of American grand strategy so readers can compare proposed strategies with the official U S government position Intellectual Property Rights, Development, and Catch Up Hiroyuki Odagiri,2010-04-08 For most countries economic development involves catching up with leading countries This needs more than physical assets and labour it requires technological capabilities educational attainment entrepreneurship and development of the necessary institutional infrastructure including intellectual property rights particularly patents Going Multinational Frédérique

Sachwald,2013-01-11 At the beginning of the 1990s Korean firms embarked on an impressive wave of direct investment abroad This dramatic multinationalization was considered as yet another sign of Korea s remarkable economic performance especially as a high proportion of the foreign ventures were located in advanced countries But this unbalanced quest for globalization actually tested the Korean model to its limits after the 1997 crisis a new policy prepared the way for a surge of inward investment Using empirical tests and case studies this collection shows that Korean groups have invested in developed countries to jump over trade barriers but also to source advanced technology and marketing capabilities Moreover their ambitious strategies have been stimulated by oligopolistic rivalry among the chaebols From a policy perspective the book provides an original discussion of national ownership by questioning the substitutability between inward and outward foreign investment and its relationship with the evolution of the national innovation system By shedding light on the pattern of Korea s internationalization these essays make a valuable contribution to the theory of international production and provide important insights for the current policy debates on globalization and innovation led growth Artificial Life 8
