---

Jeffrey Heath

Functional grammar of Nunggubuyu is a detailed study of the grammar of a Papuan language. The book is written in a functionalist style, which is concerned with the way in which language is used in communication. The author, Jeffrey Heath, is a linguist who has spent a significant amount of time working with the Nunggubuyu people. The book is divided into several sections, each of which deals with a different aspect of the language. The first section is an introduction to the language and its speakers. The second section deals with the phonology of the language, and the third section deals with the morphology. The fourth section is the largest and deals with the syntax and semantics of the language. The fifth section deals with the pragmatics of the language, and the sixth section is a conclusion. The book is written in a clear and accessible style, and it is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the grammar of Nunggubuyu or in functional grammar in general.

Catching Language Felix K. Ameka, Alan Dench, Nicholas Evans, 2008-08-22 Descriptive grammars are our main vehicle for documenting and analysing the linguistic structure of the world's 6 000 languages They bring together in one place a coherent treatment of how the whole language works and therefore form the primary source of information on a given language consulted by a wide range of users areal specialists typologists theoreticians of any part of language syntax morphology phonology historical linguistics etc and members of the speech communities concerned The writing of a descriptive grammar is a major intellectual challenge that calls on the grammarian to balance a respect for the language's distinctive genius with an awareness of how other languages work to combine rigour with readability to depict structural regularities while respecting a corpus of real material and to represent something of the native speaker's competence while recognising the variation inherent in any speech community Despite a recent surge of awareness of the need to document little known languages there is no book that focusses on the manifold issues that face the author of a descriptive grammar This volume brings together contributors who approach the problem from a range of angles Most have written descriptive grammars themselves but others represent different types of reader Among the topics they address are overall issues of grammar design the complementary roles of outsider and native speaker grammarians the balance between grammar and lexicon cross linguistic comparability the role of explanation in grammatical description the interplay of theory and a range of fieldwork methods in language description the challenges of describing languages in their cultural and historical context and the tensions between linguistic particularity established practice of particular schools of linguistic description and the need for a universally commensurable analytic framework This book will renew the field of grammaticography addressing a multiple readership of descriptive linguists typologists and formal linguists by bringing together a range of distinguished practitioners from around the world to address these questions

Nominal Classification in Aboriginal Australia Mark Harvey, Nicholas Reid, 1997-09-02 This volume aims to extend both the range of analyses and the database on nominal classification systems Previous analyses of nominal classification systems have focussed on two areas the semantics of the classification system and the role of the system in discourse In many nominal classification systems there appear to be a significant percentage of nominals with an arbitrary classification There is a considerable body of literature aimed at elucidating the semantic bases of classification in such systems thereby reducing the degree of apparent arbitrariness Contributors to this volume continue this line of enquiry but also propose that arbitrariness in itself has a role from a wider socio cultural perspective Previous analyses of the discourse role of classification systems posit that they play a significant role in referential tracking For the languages surveyed in this volume contributors propose that reference instantiation is an equally significant function and indeed that reference instantiation and tracking cannot be properly divided from one another This volume provides detailed information on classification in a number of northern Australian languages whose systems are otherwise poorly known Routledge Library Editions: Linguistics Various, 2021-12-02

we usually think of ties between people based upon blood or marriage But we also have other ways nowadays called performative of establishing kinship or hinting at kinship many Christians have in addition to parents godparents members of a trade union may refer to each other as brother or sister Similar performative ties are even more common among the so called tribal peoples that anthropologists have studied and especially in recent years they have received considerable attention from scholars in this field However these scholars tend to argue that performative kinship in the Tribal World is semantically on a par with kinship established through procreation and marriage Harold Scheffler long time Professor of Anthropology at Yale University has argued by contrast that procreative ties are everywhere semantically central i e focal that they provide bases from which other kinship ties are extended Most of the essays in this volume illustrate the validity of Scheffler's position though two contest it and one exemplifies the soundness of a similarly universalistic stance in gender behaviour. This book will be of interest to everyone concerned with current controversy in kinship and gender studies as well as those who would know what anthropologists have to say about human nature. The study of kinship once ruled the discipline of anthropology and Hal Scheffler was one of its magisterial figures. This volume reminds us why Scheffler's powerful analyses of kinship systems often conflicted with the views of his more relativist contemporaries. He cut through the fog of theory to emphasise the human essentials namely the importance of the social bonds rooted in motherhood and fatherhood. Anthropology in its decades long retreat from the serious study of kinship has lost a great deal. This volume points the way to a restoration. Peter Wood, National Association of Scholars.

Observers from the West the book contends have incorrectly projected rigid ethnocentric notions of love and marriage onto cultures around the world. Contributors look beyond each society's official institutions to explore expressions of love offering new perspectives on arranged marriages and polygamy and reexamining as well the other side of the equation rejection and grief.
