THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN NUTRITION, AGING, AND HEALTH: A PERSONAL AND SOCIAL CHALLENGE, Nutrition, Aging, and the Elderly D.E. Danford, H.N. Munro, 2013-11-11

The proportion of the population over 65 years of age is increasing steadily in most industrialized countries In the United States the proportion of elderly people has risen from four percent in 1900 to 11 % in 1978 and is projected to be 14% by the year 2000 The occurrence of debilitating chronic diseases in the elderly increases with each additional year These diseases along with the natural loss of tissue function that occurs throughout adult life impose a heavy burden on the health care system Nutrition plays an important etiologic role in many of these degenerative changes Consequently the aging segment of the population presents a challenge to the nutrition scientist who should be able to recommend optimal intakes of nutrients to minimize the functional losses associated with aging and to optimize the health of those already elderly This sixth volume in the series Human Nutrition A Comprehensive Treatise provides a conspectus of the various interactions of nutrition with the aging process and a comprehensive survey of current knowledge of the amounts of individual nutrients needed by the elderly The volume begins with a general survey of the multifaceted relationship of nutrition to aging followed by four chapters on how nutrition can affect age related changes in selected body functions The next six chapters cover the available evidence regarding the needs of the elderly for dietary energy protein calcium trace elements vitamins and fiber

Reichel's Care of the Elderly Joseph J. Gallo, William Reichel, 1999 Geared specifically for the family practitioner this text provides clinical approaches to the whole geriatric patient Topics covered in this fifth edition include behavioural disturbances in dementia driving and the older adult and clinical practice guidelines in the elderly

Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, 2012-05-15 The U S population of older adults is predicted to grow rapidly as baby boomers those born between 1946 and 1964 begin to reach 65 years of age Simultaneously advancements in medical care and improved awareness of healthy lifestyles have led to longer life expectancies The Census Bureau projects that the population of Americans 65 years of age and older will rise from approximately 40 million in 2010 to 55 million in 2020 a 36 percent increase Furthermore older adults are choosing to live independently in the community setting rather than residing in an institutional environment Furthermore the types of services needed by this population are shifting due to changes in their health issues Older adults have historically been viewed as underweight and frail however over the past decade there has been an increase in the number of obese older persons Obesity in older adults is not only associated with medical comorbidities such as diabetes it is also a major risk factor for functional decline and homebound status The baby boomers have a greater prevalence of obesity than any of their historic counterparts and projections forecast an aging population with even greater chronic disease burden and disability In light of the increasing numbers of older adults choosing to live independently rather than in nursing homes and the important role nutrition can play in healthy aging the Institute of Medicine IOM convened a public workshop to illuminate issues related to community based delivery of nutrition services for older adults and to identify nutrition interventions and model programs Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community summarizes the presentations and discussions prepared from the workshop transcript and slides This report examines nutrition related issues of concern experienced by older adults in the community including nutrition screening food insecurity sarcopenic obesity dietary patterns for older adults and economic issues This report explores transitional care as individuals move from acute subacute or chronic care settings to the community and provides models of transitional care in the community This report also provides examples of successful intervention models in the community setting and covers the discussion of research gaps in knowledge about nutrition interventions and services for older adults in the community Geriatric Nutrition Ronni Chernoff,2013-08-02 A authoritative reference written to help professionals understand the role of nutrition in the maintenance of health the management of chronic conditions and the treatment of serious illness The fourth edition of this text provides a comprehensive review of nutritional assessment intervention programs for the elderly and health promotion activities

Nutrition Across the Lifespan for Healthy Aging National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine,Health and Medicine Division,Food and Nutrition Board,Food Forum,2017-05-11 In September 2016 the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine convened a workshop to examine trends and patterns in aging and factors related to healthy aging in the United States with a focus on nutrition and how nutrition can sustain and promote healthy aging not just in late adulthood but beginning in pregnancy and early childhood and extending throughout the lifespan Participants discussed the role of nutrition in the aging process at various stages in life changes in organ systems over the lifespan and changes that occur with age related to cognitive brain and mental health and explored opportunities to move forward in promoting healthy aging in the United States This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop Nutrition and Functional Foods for Healthy Aging Ronald Ross Watson,2017-02-01 Nutrition and Functional Foods for Healthy Aging aims to equip anyone studying geriatric nutrition or working with aging adults with the latest scientific reviews of critical topics The major objective of this book is to review in detail the health problems of the aged and how normal food lifestyle or nutritional and dietary supplements can help treat them Nutrient requirements for optimum health and function of aging physiological systems are often quite distinct from those required for young people. The special nutrition problems of the aged are intensively researched and tested especially as the elderly become a larger percentage of the population. Many chronic diseases and cancers are found with higher frequency in the aged and it is also widely known that many elderly people use foods and nutrients well above the recommended daily allowance which can be detrimental to optimal health. Explains the evidence supporting nutritional interventions relevant to age related diseases. Reviews the macro and micro nutrient requirements of aging adults and their variables. Describes how alcohol, drugs and caffeine can impact deficiencies also exploring functional food and dietary supplements that can be used for prevention and treatment.

Nutrition for the Older Adult Melissa Bernstein, Ann Luggen, 2010. Nutrition for the Older Adult is a clear comprehensive text that introduces students to nutrition and health promotion for older adults. Covering such important topics as the physiological changes of aging, weight and nutrition problems in older adults, nutritional assessment and support for the elderly and diet and cultural diversity as well as exercise prescriptions for older adults, this text is an essential resource for students in the fields of nutrition, nursing and gerontology.

Nutrition for the Older Adult Melissa Bernstein, Nancy Munoz, 2019-01-02. Updated to the latest data and expert information, the Third Edition of Nutrition for the Older Adult introduces students to the unique nutritional needs of this growing population. Designed for the undergraduate, the text begins by covering the basics including the demographics of aging, physiology of aging and vitamin and mineral requirements for older adults. It then delves into clinical considerations including the nutritional implications of diseases and conditions common among older adults. Additional coverage includes nutritional assessment, pharmacology, nutritional support and much more. With new pedagogical features along with revamped end of chapter activities and questions, Nutrition for the Older Adult is an essential resource for students in the fields of nutrition, nursing, public health and gerontology.

Handbook of Clinical Nutrition and Aging Connie W. Bales, Christine S. Ritchie, 2003-10-01. A compendium of detailed strategies for using nutritional interventions to ameliorate a host of age related disorders and an evidence based review of what interventions are and are not effective. These range from the effects of nutrition on the aging eye, the sense of taste and smell, hearing loss, sarcopenia and dementia to the clinical role of nutrition in vascular and pulmonary disorders, cancer, immunity, endocrine and alimentary tract disorders and renal and musculoskeletal disorders. The authors present the physiological basis for each disorder, provide the latest information about the interaction of nutrition with each condition and review the potential routes and mechanisms for clinical intervention. All clinical chapters conclude with a summary of practical applications and treatment guidelines for secondary prevention, management and therapy.

Handbook of Pain and Aging David I. Mostofsky, Jacob Lomranz, 2013-11-11. From time to time professional journals and edited volumes devote some of their pages to considerations of pain and aging as they occur among the aged in different cultures and populations. One starts from several reasonable assumptions among them that aging per se is not a disease process yet the risk and frequency of disease processes increase with ongoing years. The physical body's functioning and ability to restore all forms of damage and insult slow down the immune system becomes compromised and the slow growing pathologies reach their critical mass in the later years. The psychological body also becomes weaker with unfulfilled promises and expectations and with tragedies that visit individuals and families and the prospect that whatever worlds remain to be conquered will most certainly not be met with success in the rapidly passing days and years that can only culminate in death. Despair and depression coupled with infirmity and sensory and/or motor inefficiency aggravate both the threshold and the tolerance for discomfort and synergistically collaborate to perpetuate a vicious cycle in which the one may mask the other. Although the clinician is armed with the latest advances in medicine and pharmacology, significant improvement continues to elude her or him. The geriatric specialist, all too familiar with such realities, usually can offer little else than a hortative to learn to live with it, but the powers and effectiveness of learning itself have declined.

Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community Food and Nutrition Board, Institute of Medicine, 2012-05-15

The U.S. population of older adults is predicted to grow rapidly as baby boomers, those born between 1946 and 1964, begin to reach 65 years of age. Simultaneously, advancements in medical care and improved awareness of healthy lifestyles have led to longer life expectancies. The Census Bureau projects that the population of Americans 65 years of age and older will rise from approximately 40 million in 2010 to 55 million in 2020, a 36 percent increase. Furthermore, older adults are choosing to live independently in the community setting rather than residing in an institutional environment. Furthermore, the types of services needed by this population are shifting due to changes in their health issues. Older adults have historically been viewed as underweight and frail; however, over the past decade, there has been an increase in the number of obese older persons. Obesity in older adults is not only associated with medical comorbidities such as diabetes, it is also a major risk factor for functional decline and homebound status. The baby boomers have a greater prevalence of obesity than any of their historic counterparts, and projections forecast an aging population with even greater chronic disease burden and disability. In light of the increasing numbers of older adults choosing to live independently rather than in nursing homes and the important role nutrition can play in healthy aging, the Institute of Medicine (IOM) convened a public workshop to illuminate issues related to community-based delivery of nutrition services for older adults and to identify nutrition interventions and model programs. Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community summarizes the presentations and discussions prepared from the workshop transcript and slides. This report examines nutrition-related issues of concern experienced by older adults in the community, including nutrition screening, food insecurity, sarcopenic obesity, dietary patterns for older adults, and economic issues. This report explores transitional care as individuals move from acute, subacute, or chronic care settings to the community and provides models of transitional care in the community. This report also provides examples of successful intervention models in the community setting and covers the discussion of research gaps in knowledge about nutrition interventions and services for older adults in the community.
