Tinged with Gold Michael A. Tomlan, 2013-11-15 Today hop growing remains a viable commercial enterprise only in parts of the far western United States notably in Washington But as James Fenimore Cooper remembered the mid nineteenth century in Cooperstown New York was a time when the hop was king and the whole countryside was one great hop yard and beautiful In Tinged with Gold Michael A Tomlan explores all aspects of hop culture in the United States and provides a background for understanding the buildings devoted to drying baling and storing hops The work considers the history of these structures as it illustrates their development over almost two centuries the result of agrarian commercialism and nearly continuous technological improvement In examining the context in which the buildings were constructed Tomlan considers the growth cultivation and harvesting of the plant the economic social and recreational activities of the people involved in hop culture and the record of mechanical inventions and technical developments that shaped hop kilns hop houses and hop driers and coolers in the various areas where the crop flourished The work challenges assumptions about the noncommercial nature of American agriculture in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries and raises important questions about the folk tradition of hop houses arguing that the designs of these buildings were rational responses to commercial imperatives rather than the continuance of arcane English or European customs Tinged with Gold brings hop culture to life as it explores the history of this neglected aspect of rural agriculture Because the work demonstrates that the significance of a relatively obscure building type can be fully appreciated if placed in its historical context it provides a model for studying other rural structures Drawing upon an impressive array of primary and secondary sources this work is a definitive history of hop culture in the United States A Catalogue of Ancient and Modern, Gold, Silver, and Copper Coins & Medals of All Nations, for Sale John K.
