It is now universally recognized that anger, guilt, joy, jealousy, fear, etc. have a strong effect on our body. The Psychology of the Emotions Th. Ribot, 2023-11-17 In The Psychology of the Emotions, Th. Ribot embarks on an incisive exploration of the complex interplay between the mind and emotions, positioning the work at the intersection of psychology and philosophy. Ribot employs a clear analytical literary style, meticulously dissecting emotional phenomena through a scientific lens. By challenging contemporaneous theories and merging empirical findings with philosophical inquiries, he offers profound insights into the nature of emotions, arguing for their foundational role in human consciousness and behavior while situating his discourse within the context of 19th century psychological thought. Th. Ribot, a pioneering French psychologist and philosopher, significantly contributed to the development of modern psychological theories. His interest in the emotional life stemmed from his academic background in both psychology and philosophy alongside personal experiences that shaped his understanding of human affect Ribot's work reflects a broader intellectual movement aiming to establish psychology as a rigorous scientific discipline drawing from natural sciences to unravel the intricacies of human sentiment This authoritative text is recommended for scholars and enthusiasts alike providing a comprehensive foundation for the study of emotions in psychological contexts Ribot's nuanced analysis not only enriches our understanding of emotionality but also invites readers to reflect on their own emotional experiences making it an essential read for anyone engaged in the fields of psychology philosophy or human behavior

Emotions, Values, and Agency Christine Tappolet, 2016 The emotions we experience are crucial to who we are to what we think and to what we do But what are emotions exactly and how do they relate to agency The aim of this book is to spell out an account of emotions which is grounded on analogies between emotions and sensory experiences and to explore the implications of this account for our understanding of human agency The central claim is that emotions consist in perceptual experiences of values such as the fearsome the disgusting or the admirable A virtue of this account is that it affords a better grasp of a variety of interconnected phenomena such as motivation values responsibility and reason responsiveness In the process of exploring the implications of the Perceptual Theory of emotions several claims are proposed First emotions normally involve desires that set goals but they can be contemplative in that they can occur without any motivation Second evaluative judgements can be understood in terms of appropriate emotions in so far as appropriateness is taken to consist in correct representation Third by contrast with what Strawsonian theories hold the concept of moral responsibility is not response dependent but the relationship between emotions and moral responsibility is mediated by values Finally in so far as emotions are perceptions of values they can be considered to be perceptions of practical reasons so that on certain conditions acting on the basis of one's emotions can consist in responding to one's reasons
