RESUMEN.— Se analizó la riqueza de especies, composición, abundancia y diversidad de aves en diferentes unidades ambientales en el Parque Nacional Pre-Delta (Entre Ríos, Argentina). Fueron muestreadas tres unidades ambientales (bosque ribereño no inundable, bosque ribereño inundable y humedal) desde marzo de 2006 hasta marzo de 2007, mediante puntos de conteo. Se registraron 147 especies y una abundancia promedio de 1845 individuos. Existieron diferencias significativas en la riqueza, la abundancia promedio y la diversidad entre las unidades ambientales. Los humedales presentaron la mayor riqueza y abundancia. Los bosques presentaron relativamente pocas especies, aunque el bosque ribereño inundable presentó la más alta diversidad promedio. Ambos tipos de bosque compartieron la mayoría de las especies. Los bosques en conjunto solo contribuyeron con 29 especies (20%) que no aparecieron en los humedales y con 22 especies indicadoras. Los humedales, por la alta proporción de especies y las abundancias que presentaron, serían la unidad ambiental más representativa del área de estudio. Algunas especies indicadoras de bosques también fueron registradas en los humedales debido a la contigüidad entre las unidades ambientales. El alto número de especies adicionales encontrado sugiere que hay una elevada proporción de especies generalistas y que es necesario un abordaje integral que considere a todas las unidades ambientales cuando se estudia la dinámica de la avifauna del área de estudio.

PALABRAS CLAVE: bosques ribereños, Delta del Paraná, humedales, Parque Nacional Pre-Delta, unidades ambientales.

ABSTRACT. BIRD ASSEMBLAGES OF THE PRE-DELTA NATIONAL PARK (ENTRE RÍOS, ARGENTINA): ANALYSIS OF THE ORNITHOLOGICAL IMPORTANCE OF DIFFERENT ENVIRONMENTAL UNITS.— Species richness, composition, abundance and diversity of birds were analyzed in different environmental units in the Pre-Delta National Park (Entre Ríos, Argentina). Three environmental units (non-flooded riverine forest, flooded riverine forest and wetlands) were sampled by point counts from March 2006 until March 2007. A total of 147 bird species and an average abundance of 1845 individuals were recorded. A significant difference among habitats was observed in species richness, average abundance and diversity. Wetlands showed the highest richness and abundance values. Both types of riverine forests exhibited a relatively low number of species, although the flooded riverine forest showed the highest average diversity values. Both forests shared most species, and contributed with only 29 species (20%) which did not appear in wetlands, and with 22 indicator species. Wetlands, with higher proportions of species number and abundance, constitute the most representative environmental unit. Some forest indicator species were also recorded in wetlands because of the closeness between environmental units. The high number of additional species suggests a large amount of generalist species. An integral approach embracing all environmental units is needed in order to understand the dynamics of this avifauna.

Key words: Delta of the Paraná River, environmental units, Pre-Delta National Park, riverine forests, wetlands.

Mammals of South America, Volume 1 Alfred L. Gardner, 2008-09-15 The vast terrain between Panama and Tierra del Fuego contains some of the world's richest mammalian fauna but until now it has lacked a comprehensive systematic reference to the identification distribution and taxonomy of its mammals. The first such book of its kind and the inaugural volume in a three part series Mammals of South America both summarizes existing information and encourages further research of the mammals indigenous to the region. Containing identification keys and brief descriptions of each order, family and genus, the first volume of Mammals of South America covers marsupials, shrews, armadillos, sloths, anteaters and bats. Species accounts include taxonomic descriptions, synonymies, keys to identification, distributions with maps and a gazetteer of marginal localities, lists of recognized subspecies, brief summaries of natural history information and discussions of issues related to taxonomic interpretations. Highly anticipated and much needed, this book will be a landmark contribution to mammalogy, zoology, tropical biology and conservation biology.

The Birds of South America Robert S. Ridgely, Guy Tudor, William L. Brown, World Wildlife Fund, 1989 A land of incredible natural resources, the South American continent is rich in plant and animal species. Among birds alone over 3 100 species are either resident or migrant. Birds are some of South America's treasures and also one of its most endangered resources. Hence the need for a descriptive record of South American birds that will serve both professional and amateur bird students and encourage conservation of these magnificent species. Although South American birds elicit much popular and scientific interest, they have never been completely or satisfactorily described and cataloged in a single published source. The Birds of South America projected to be a four volume work thus fills a critical void. Starting from a museum approach, the authors have examined specimens of each subspecies, comparing them visually and trying to discern the patterns in their plumage variation both intra and inter specifically. They take a new look at bird systematics, reassessing relationships in light of new information. Perhaps most important, they combine this review and analysis with extensive field observations to give an accurate incisive portrait of the birds in nature. At a time when rapid development is devastating millions of acres of tropical habitat in South America this record of an endangered resource becomes crucial If the birds and other plants and animals of South America are to be saved they must first be known and appreciated The Birds of South America is a major step in that direction Volume II includes the Ovenbirds and Woodcreepers Antbirds Gnatcatchers and Tapaculos Tyrant Flycatchers and Manakins and Cotingas The remaining volumes of The Birds of South America will be Volume III The Nonpasserines Landbirds Volume IV The Nonpasserines Waterbirds No release date has been set for the remaining volumes Proceedings of The Academy of Natural Sciences (Vol. 150, 2000) ,2006 Ornithological Gazetteer of Peru Lorain Stephens,Melvin Alvah Traylor,1983 The Davis Collection of Ornithological and Other Natural History Documents at the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology Cornell University.
