A Compendium of Neuropsychological Tests Esther Strauss, Elisabeth M. S. Sherman, Otfried Spreen, 2006-04-06 For the practicing neuropsychologist or researcher keeping up with the sheer number of newly published or updated tests is a challenge as is evaluating the utility and psychometric properties of neuropsychological tests in a clinical context The goal of the third edition of A Compendium of Neuropsychological Tests a well established neuropsychology reference text is twofold First the Compendium is intended to serve as a guidebook that provides a comprehensive overview of the essential aspects of neuropsychological assessment practice. Second, it is intended as a comprehensive sourcebook of critical reviews of major neuropsychological assessment tools for the use by practicing clinicians and researchers. Written in a comprehensive, easy-to-read reference format and based on an exhaustive review of research literature in neuropsychology, neurology, psychology, and related disciplines, the book covers topics such as basic aspects of neuropsychological assessment as well as the theoretical background, norms, and the utility, reliability, and validity of neuropsychological tests. For this third edition, all chapters have been extensively revised and updated. The text has been considerably expanded to provide a comprehensive yet practical overview of the state of the field. Two new chapters have been added: Psychometrics in Neuropsychological Assessment and Norms in Psychological Assessment. The first two chapters present basic psychometric concepts and principles. Chapters three and four consider practical aspects of the history taking interview and the assessment process itself. Chapter five provides guidelines on report writing, and chapters six through sixteen consist of detailed critical reviews of neuropsychological tests and address the topics of intelligence, achievement, executive function, attention, memory, language, visual perception, somatosensory, olfactory, function, mood, personality, and response bias. A unique feature is the inclusion of tables that summarize salient features of tests within each domain so that readers can easily compare measures. Additional tables within each test review summarize important features of each test, highlight aspects of each normative dataset, and provide an overview of psychometric properties. Of interest to neuropsychologists, neurologists, psychiatrists, and educational and clinical psychologists working with adults as well as pediatric populations, this volume will aid practitioners in selecting appropriate testing measures for their patients and will provide them with the knowledge needed to make empirically supported interpretations of test results.

Behavioral and neuroscientific analysis of economic decision making in animals Tobias Kalenscher, Marijn Van Wingerden. The experimental analysis of animal behavior has a rich tradition in psychology, behavioral ecology, and many other scientific branches dedicated to the study of decision making. However, it has never enjoyed a similar popularity in economics. This has recently changed with the dawn of neuroeconomics, a discipline combining the analytic and experimental tools of psychology and economics with the technologies available in neuroscience to unravel the neurobiological mechanisms underlying economic behavior. Since many of the sophisticated neuroscientific techniques can only be used on animals, neuroeconomists have come up with a large and ever-growing repertoire of animal models to probe economic decision making. Besides the value of using animals as model systems to emulate human economic behavior, the discipline of animal economic decision making exists in its very own right: an abundance of animal species at various evolutionary stages show behavior that complies with many of the predictions of economic theory whilst at the same time demonstrating violations of optimal choice models that are reminiscent of similar anomalies found in human behavior. Hence, the analysis of animal choice does not only offer insights into the evolutionary origins of economic decision making; it also testifies that the analysis of animal behavior is a convenient economical and sound way to test competing economic decision models in optimally controlled experimental environments to probe their neural implementation and to yield common denominators in choice behavior In short economic theory provides more than just an alternative language to describe animal psychology its combination with biology psychology and neuroscience gives way to synergy effects that open up new venues for studying economic choice In this special issue we would like to gather the latest results from this cross disciplinary topic address the overlap and discrepancies in the neurobiology of economic decision making found between species and identify the challenges that lie ahead in translating results from species to species and ultimately to humans The exclusive focus on non human animals makes this Research Topic unique and distinct from previous special issues which covered a broader range of matters and subjects in the neurobiological analysis of decision making

Popular Photography, 1996-10 Daylighting Design Mohamed Boubekri, 2014-09-25 For thousands of years people have aligned their homes with the sun This tendency decreased with the availability of artificial light Yet due to the health effects of artificial light as well as rising energy costs the issue of designing with daylight is of great importance again today The primary objective of daylight systems is to make maximum use of daylight for certain building types and climates The book documents the various dimensions of the optimum use of daylight with particular reference to window orientation light distribution and prism technology and discusses the health and economic related aspects In the final chapter existing design concepts are documented in detail including the expansion of the Art Institute of Chicago Museum in the United States by Renzo Piano Building Workshop Terminal 3 of the Changi Airport in Singapore by Skidmore Owings Merrill and the Clever House in Germany by Behnisch Architekten

Behave Robert M. Sapolsky, 2017-05-02 Why do we do the things we do Over a decade in the making this game changing book is Robert Sapolsky's genre shattering attempt to answer that question as fully as perhaps only he could looking at it from every angle Sapolsky's storytelling concept is delightful but it also has a powerful intrinsic logic he starts by looking at the factors that bear on a person's reaction in the precise moment a behavior occurs and then hops back in time from there in stages ultimately ending up at the deep history of our species and its genetic inheritance And so the first category of explanation is the neurobiological one What goes on in a person s brain a second before the behavior happens Then he pulls out to a slightly larger field of vision a little earlier in time What sight sound or smell triggers the nervous system to produce that behavior And then what hormones act hours to days earlier to change how responsive that individual is to the stimuli which trigger the nervous system By now he has increased our field of vision so that we are thinking about neurobiology and the sensory world of our environment and endocrinology in trying to explain what happened Sapolsky keeps going next to what features of the environment affected that person s brain and then back to the childhood of the individual and then to their genetic makeup Finally he expands the view to encompass factors larger than that one individual How culture has shaped that individual s group what ecological factors helped shape that culture and on and on back to evolutionary factors thousands and even millions of years old The result is one of the most dazzling tours de horizon of the science of human behavior ever attempted a majestic synthesis that harvests cutting edge research across a range of disciplines to provide a subtle and nuanced perspective on why we ultimately do the things we do for good and for ill Sapolsky builds on this understanding to wrestle with some of our deepest and thorniest questions relating to tribalism and xenophobia hierarchy and competition morality and free will and war and peace Wise humane often very funny Behave is a towering achievement powerfully humanizing and downright heroic in its own right
