

Urbanisation and Development of Rural Small Enterprises

Studying the Linkage with Focus on West Bengal

This article attempts to seek a relationship between urbanisation and the development of small rural firms, using West Bengal as a case study. Small industrialisation is found to be directly related to the degree of urbanisation, and there is a clear urban concentration of small enterprises in West Bengal. Infrastructure and services are mainly confined to a small region and rural industrialisation has not been promoted. Government investment on rural infrastructure is essential to promote the rural non-agricultural sector in the backward districts.

SUBRATA DUTTA

One of the major problems of contemporary developing countries is the unhealthy structure of urbanisation – a tendency for the urban population to concentrate in one or a very few of the major population centres. That was not a characteristic of developed countries when they were at similar stages in development. Their urban centres were more numerous and the urban population more diffused over those centres.

Introduction

This paper mainly attempts to describe the relationship between urbanisation and rural industrialisation. Small-scale rural industries cannot grow in backward villages where basic infrastructure facilities are not available. The promotion of dispersed growth-centres or small towns is essential for the growth and development of rural small enterprises. Towns act as market centres for the surrounding villages. The greater the degree of urbanisation, the more the growth of small-scale enterprises. The small-scale industries which exist in the newly settled urban areas or in small towns may often be called rural industries. There is always some confusion with definitions. That is why the definitions of small-scale industries and the definition of rural industries are described here separately after the conceptual framework and before going into the main discussion. It can also be considered that all rural industries are small industries but all small industries are not rural industries.

The Conceptual Framework

To some writers, the connection between industry and the city was, perhaps, too obvious to require further elucidation. Others found a ready explanation at hand. Hoselitz (1951) has argued that the economic development of underdeveloped countries is contingent upon the introduction of industry; industrialisation, in turn, is associated with urban growth. Davis and Golden (1955) have also found no difficulty in maintaining that the city makes its own peculiar contribution to the process of economic development, or in asserting the existence of a direct relationship between urbanisation and industrialisation in which the former indicates and stimulates the latter. But can a city or town grow without the support of infrastructure? In Lampard's (1955) view, the great urban explosion of the second half of the 19th century was seen to stem directly from improvements in communications, which served to concentrate economic opportunities in locations that offered the greatest cost advantages in the procurement, processing and distribution of goods. He has strongly argued that, in a culture of economic competition, producers always tend to scatter or concentrate according to the principle of minimum cost. Producers prefer urban sites in order to have access to better transfer facilities, broader and more flexible labour markets, and numerous auxiliary business services like banking, insurance, brokerage, utilities, or fire and police protection. Conventional production theory has led many to suppose that economies of scale and mobility of factors would eventually bring all activities into great centres, but the persistence of small-scale plants and widely dispersed towns is not necessarily a token of irrationality [Lampard 1955]. Oberai (1993) has argued that public sector investment in infrastructure development (power generation, water treatment, or transportation systems) is concentrated in the urban centres in order to exploit economies of scale. Industrial firms located in cities thus reap substantial cost benefits because of their access both to infrastructure and to large and diversified markets for labour and other inputs. Anderson (1971) has argued that whether in ancient, medieval, or modern times, if there is technical invention that leads to social change, its point of beginning tends most likely to be in urban centres.

According to Gilbert and Gugler (1982), the global depression of the 1930s and the effects of the second world war led to the spontaneous process of industrial expansion in the larger third world nations. They have argued that the initial stage of industrialisation saw the establishment of companies producing directly for the consumer market. Many of these products were only affordable by the higher income groups in the society, most of whom lived in the major cities. Consequently, most market-oriented companies tended to concentrate in the largest cities. Even while

Rural Industrialisation In West Bengal:

Rural Industrialisation in West Bengal Pradip Kumar Biswas, 2003 This book analyses the pattern and basis of rural industrialisation in West Bengal. Existence of long tradition of crafts indigenous institutions of skill formation of trading of social and community networks of the petty producers helped a rapid growth of the industries given the favourable conditions created by the state in the 1970s and 1980s. Analysing the experience of England Japan and China the book identifies factors like slow growth of agriculture ineffective and often contradictory state policies of innovations and training incentives credit and reservation as being primarily responsible for the poor performance of the Indian rural industries. These problems notwithstanding West Bengal government's active role made a favourable impact on rural industries. The institutions such as master traders systems and cooperatives facilitated innovation and skill upgradation smooth adoption of improved technology promotion of new products. But due to overall change in the attitude and economic policy of the country towards free market without preparation at the ground level the rural industries start declining.

Indian Industrial Clusters Keshab Das, 2017-05-15 This book presents an in depth analysis of the functional dynamics of Indian industrial clusters which have grown and stayed as hubs of business activity in India thanks to a large calibrated domestic market for goods. The examples given contribute towards the understanding of theoretical underpinnings of small firm clusters in LDCs and also indicate steps towards effective policy making for SME development in general and local economic regeneration in LDCs in particular. The industries studied include modern as well as traditional artisanal sectors which span at least ten Indian states. They provide insights into informality labour inter firm relationship cooperation and competition technological and organisational flexibility and forms of supportive institutional arrangements and nature of linkages with agencies external to the cluster among other things. This book will be of particular interest to SME practitioners and to students and researchers of economics business management regional development economic geography industrial sociology and industrial organisation.

Micro and Small Enterprises in India Keshab Das, 2011-04-26 This book presents a set of analytical and deeply policy oriented articles on the dynamics of growth and performance of micro and small enterprises in India during the period of reforms. It provides fairly detailed analyses of policy changes for the micro and small enterprises sector as well as empirical analyses of performance and efficiency of the unorganised manufacturing sector. It examines a range of emerging and persistent complex issues facing this crucial sector including credit exports trade regulations capacity building subcontracting clustering entrepreneurship and rural industrialisation. Focusing on the constraints facing this sector even during the economic reforms most of the articles analyse how and why special attention particularly by the state needs to be paid towards enhancing firm competitiveness. Broad basing the benefits of policy interventions to the overwhelmingly present yet left out micro enterprises including rural areas forms an important concern. This volume attempts to critically examine critical areas of intervention that could open up possibilities of developing a strong micro and small enterprises sector in India Indian Economy: Reforms and Development Pradip Kumar Biswas, Panchanan Das, 2019-08-09 The book presents a comprehensive study of the impact of policy reforms on output employment and productivity growth across sectors of India since 1991 It showcases varied responses from different sectors as they faced different degrees of policy interventions and challenges or opportunities as regards markets technology and availability of skills and other complementary resources The book also discusses the contributions of the service sector on India's GDP and employment The book throws light on the phenomena of rising inequality and persistent poverty which continues to shadow and be a hallmark of post reform India despite high economic growth It underlines the failure of these reforms to bring about major change in social and economic organizations and institutions The book's contents stress on the criticality of addressing these issues as they have a serious potential of jeopardizing the country's ability to maintain high growth momentum With these pertinent topics the book would be of interest not only to the research community but also to policy makers and practitioners of various sectors addressed here FORMAL AND INFORMAL SECTOR: CAUSES, CONSEQUENCES AND GOVERNMENT MEASURES IN SOCIO-ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT Dr. Chinmoy Sarkar, Prof. Sandipan Bhattachariya, Dr. Ranjan Sarkar, 2024-02-15 Formal and Informal Sector in India Causes Consequences and Policy framework in socio economic development is an endeavor of the Research Wing of Siliguri College of Commerce Siliguri to get an insight about the emerging issues faced by the formal and informal sector in India As a developing economy India has grown in GDP terms since 2005 and is one of the fastest growing economies in the world as of now overtaking the GDP of Great Britain in 2022 Apart from her satisfactory growth in terms of formal planning the size and magnitude of India's informal sector is something which is a concern for both researchers and planners Large informal clusters in metro cities of Argentina Brazil and Mexico as well as in emerging metros like Surat Siliguri Bhopal and Vijaywada may thwart any comprehensive planning premises of a welfare state There are issues of livelihoods and educational attainments if the informal base is large and operate beyond the spectrum of Government initiatives The vulnerabilities of the migrant workers the livelihoods of small traders and the literacy attainments of the school going children enrolled in low cost public schools were severely impacted when India was closed down for almost 187 days in 2020 2022 during the COVID crisis The presence of informal workers in agricultural sector small scale industries MSMEs and informal employment is anything close to 235 million in India There has been sincere efforts by our Governments to uplift the rural poor and the marginalized urban clusters by means of self employment schemes and tax incentives but such efforts do not reach the informal economy Therefore the main focus lies in integrating these clusters with the formal economy This is undoubtedly a formidable task Further there is a need for a national floor to protect the wages of the clusters operating in the informal sector in terms of minimum wage health and safety measures as well as literacy attainments On the other side schooling literacy attainments and livelihoods were severely affected during the lockdown
