V. Woolcock,2008 Brazil is a country of sharp disparities The gap between the richest and the poorest citizens is one of the largest in the world Inequality in Brazil is well known but its low mobility is not Until now few studies have sought to investigate how forms of social exclusion constrain socioeconomic mobility Why do particular groups remain excluded and trapped in poverty for generations What do Brazilians themselves think about income inequality and social mobility This study explores these issues provides a set of options to redress them and promotes a national dialogue for action In addi

Success in Agricultural Transformation Isabelle Tsakok,2011-08-01 To lift and keep millions out of poverty requires that smallholder agriculture be productive and profitable in the developing world Do we know how to make this happen Researchers and practitioners still debate how best to do so The prevailing methodology which claims causality from measures of statistical significance is inductive and yields contradictory results In this book instead of correlations Isabelle Tsakok looks for patterns common to cases of successful agricultural transformation and then tests them against other cases She proposes a hypothesis that five sets of conditions are necessary to achieve success She concludes that government investment in and delivery of public goods and services sustained over decades is essential to maintaining these conditions and thus successfully transform poverty ridden agricultures No amount of foreign aid can substitute for such sustained government commitment The single most important threat to such government commitment is subservience to the rich and powerful minority
