Uncovering the Unconscious Dimensions of Planning Frank Othengrafen,2016-02-17 If planning is understood to be about the nature of place about the way in which we use land and about the physical expression of the ordering of society then it becomes apparent that planning as an activity cannot possibly be divorced from the general cultural traditions that inform it By adopting theoretical approaches from the fields of management studies cultural studies and anthropology and by using culture as an organising principle this book develops an innovative framework which provides better insights into what culture is about what the relations are between culture and planning and how culture influences planning practices It introduces a culturised planning model consisting of the analytical dimensions planning artefacts planning environment and societal environment with which to discover the unconscious routines and assumptions emotions and meanings attached to planning systems and the different concepts used in spatial planning systematically The model offers the possibility of uncovering cultural phenomena in spatial planning by providing relevant cultural dimensions and potential specifications and indicators which has not been the case so far By comparing examples of German Finnish and Greek planning habits the book illustrates cultural influence in planning and provides the readership with a feedback between the micro experiences of planners and the macro level institutional and social context as well as a more systematic comparison based on cultural values attitudes norms and rules

European Handbook of Crowdsourced Geographic Information Cristina Capineri,Muki Haklay,Haosheng Huang,Vyron Antoniou,Juhani Kettunen,Frank Ostermann,Ross Purves,2016-08-25 This book focuses on the study of the remarkable new source of geographic information that has become available in the form of user generated content accessible over the Internet through mobile and Web applications The exploitation integration and application of these sources termed volunteered geographic information VGI or crowdsourced geographic information CGI offer scientists an unprecedented opportunity to conduct research on a variety of topics at multiple scales and for diversified objectives The Handbook is organized in five parts addressing the fundamental questions What motivates citizens to provide such information in the public domain and what factors govern predict its validity What methods might be used to validate such information Can VGI be framed within the larger domain of sensor networks in which inert and static sensors are replaced or combined by intelligent and mobile humans equipped with sensing devices What limitations are imposed on VGI by differential access to broadband Internet mobile phones and other communication technologies and by concerns over privacy How do VGI and crowdsourcing enable innovation applications to benefit human society Chapters examine how crowdsourcing techniques and methods and the VGI phenomenon have motivated a multidisciplinary research community to identify both fields of applications and quality criteria depending on the use of VGI Besides harvesting tools and storage of these data research has paid remarkable attention to these information resources in an age when information and participation is one of the most important drivers of development The collection opens questions and points to new research directions in addition to the findings that each of the authors demonstrates Despite rapid progress in VGI research this Handbook also shows that there are technical social political and methodological challenges that require further studies and research

Exploring the Marketplace Series : the International News

Journal, Inc Robert W. Reinke,1992 Students analyze trade relationships between the United States and several other countries research and write articles for a news journal form a classroom corporation and market and sell their news journal to the community Measuring Public Space: The Star Model Dr Georgiana Varna,2014-10-28 In the rapidly expanding public space debate of the past few years a recurring theme is the loss of publicness of contemporary urban public places This book takes up the challenge to find an objective way to prove or disprove this phenomenon By taking the reader through a systematic and multi disciplinary literature review it asks the deceptively simple question What is publicness It answers this by first developing a new theoretical approach The dual nature of public space and secondly a new analytical tool for measuring it The Star Model of Publicness This pragmatic approach to analysing public space is tested then on three new public places recently created on the post industrial waterfront of the River Clyde in the city of Glasgow UK By seeing where and why certain public places fail direct and informed interventions can be made to improve them and through this contribute to the building of more attractive and sustainable cities By adopting a multi disciplinary approach to shed light on this slippery concept this book shows how urban design can complement other disciplines when tackling the complex task of understanding and improving the built environment s public realm It also bridges the gap between theory and practice as it draws from empirical research to suggest more quantitative approaches towards auditing and improving public places

Exploring the Math and Art Connection Daniel Jarvis,Irene Naested,2012 Daniel Jarvis and Irene Naested highlight the natural association between math and art in a series of practical ideas for the classroom because when students understand the math art connection their understanding and confidence increase in both subjects Through innovative teaching strategies and more than 100 rich learning experiences Jarvis and Naested give teachers a wealth of engaging tools to explore the math art connection with their own students This connection is established through examinations of natural and human designed objects from how pine cone scales spiral out in a Fibonacci sequence to how geometric shapes combine in architecture to form some of the most beautiful structures on the planet
