

THE MECHANISMS OF SPEECH

RESPIRATION: Inspiration, in the context of speech, refers to the control of airflow from the lungs to create speech sounds. The diaphragm and other respiratory muscles play a crucial role in generating the necessary air pressure for speech. Proper breath control is essential for sustained speech, regulating loudness, and phrasing during communication.

PHONATION: Phonation refers to the production of sound in the larynx, which houses the vocal cords. When you speak, the vocal cords vibrate as air from the lungs passes through them. This vibrating motion creates sound, which serves as the foundation for speech. Changes in pitch and tone are controlled by adjusting the tension and length of the vocal cords.

ARTICULATION: Articulation involves the precise movement of the speech organs (lips, tongue, palate, teeth, and jaw) to shape and modify the sound produced by phonation. It is the process of forming speech sounds and combining them to create words and sentences.
