Mass Media and Foreign Policy Walter C. Soderlund, 2003-05-30 The terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11 marked the end of an historical era known as the post Cold War period During this time the U S government produced no clear media guidelines for dealing with world crises and media coverage increasingly came to be focused on domestic conflicts rather than international ones In the absence of a clearly defined threat no dominant media frame replaced the time worn Cold War in media reporting Mass media has been recognized as an important intermediary between the government and the population In this context this study examines network coverage of seven post Cold War crises ranging from Cuba to Mexico occurring in the Caribbean Basin between 1990 and 1996 to evaluate the framing of these events by the various media covering them In providing context for understanding these crises this examination reviews U S policy in each case and discovers a strong correlation between the level of U S involvement in the crisis and the amount of media attention generated By appearing on the news or not the president along with key Cabinet members were able to define whether an event constituted a crisis for the United States In instances where the media received little guidance from Washington officials on the implications for the United States the media did attempt to provide explanations of events however coverage tended to be minimal Case studies include the recording and coding of language used as positive negative and neutral ambiguous

Remapping Cold War Media Alice Lovejoy, Mari Pajala, 2022-06-21 Why were Hollywood producers eager to film on the other side of the Iron Curtain How did Western computer games become popular in socialist Czechoslovakia's youth paramilitary clubs What did Finnish commercial television hope to gain from broadcasting Soviet drama Cold War media cultures are typically remembered in terms of an East West binary emphasizing conflict and propaganda Remapping Cold War Media however offers a different perspective on the period illuminating the extensive connections between media industries and cultures in Europe's Cold War East and their counterparts in the West and Global South These connections were forged by pragmatic technological economic political and aesthetic forces they had multiple at times conflicting functions and meanings And they helped shape the ways in which media circulates today from film festivals to satellite networks to coproductions Considering film literature radio photography computer games and television Remapping Cold War Media offers a transnational history of postwar media that spans Eastern and Western Europe the Nordic countries Cuba the United States and beyond Contributors draw on extensive archival research to reveal how media traveled across geopolitical boundaries the processes of translation interpretation and reception on which these travels depended and the significance of media form content industries and infrastructures then and now Press and Cold War James Aronson,1970
