Pioneers And Explorers In North America Their Own Words:

Pioneers and Explorers in North America, Their Own Words Stephen P. Tubbs, 2002-05-01 This book is a collection of writings of early English speaking pioneers and explorers in North America Articles were taken from old books or internet copies of old books When possible articles were reproduced from facsimile copies of the original printings They are presented in chronological order oldest first The oldest being originally published in 1588 the newest in 1885 The authors wrote the articles in English With the exception of Audubon all were native born English speakers Of course there were many pioneers and explorers that didn't write or speak English However articles written in other languages are not included because the book's audience is English speaking and the goal of the book is to provide articles in the words of the authors not in the words of translators I have also not included writings that have been extensively edited corrected or rewritten The English of the oldest articles was different from our present English The older English used shapes for letters that we no longer use For example Hariot Bradford and Penn used long s's These long s's look disconcertingly similar to our present day f's Here these have been converted to present day s's It makes reading much easier Most old spellings misspellings and grammar have been left as they were Although it is harder to read the older English reading it will give a better taste of the authors original thoughts Also the reader might enjoy learning to speak and write as was done years ago Sense & the world into increasingly contentious enclaves of difference ethnicity and resistance Ranging across issues involving film literature and theory as well as history politics economics sociology and anthropology these deeply interdisciplinary essays explore the interwoven forces of globalism and localism in a variety of cultural settings with a particular emphasis on the Asia Pacific region Powerful readings of the new image culture transnational film genre and the politics of spectacle are offered as is a critique of globalization as the latest guise of colonization Articles that unravel the complex links between the global and local in terms of the unfolding narrative of capital are joined by work that illuminates phenomena as diverse as yellow cab interracial sex in Japan machinic desire in Robocop movies and the Pacific Rim city An interview with Fredric Jameson by Paik Nak Chung on globalization and Pacific Rim responses is also featured as is a critical afterword by Paul Bov Positioned at the crossroads of an altered global terrain this volume the first of its kind analyzes the evolving transnational imaginary the full scope of contemporary cultural production by which national identities of political allegiance and economic regulation are being undone and in which imagined communities are being reshaped at both the global and local levels of everyday existence
