Permissible Advantage? Alan Peshkin, 2000-08 This study of Edgewood Academy a private elite college preparatory high school examines what moral choices look like when they are made by the participants in an exceptionally wealthy school and what the very existence of a privileged school indicates about American society It extends Peshkin's ongoing exploration of U S high schools and their communities each focused in a different sociocultural setting In this particular inquiry he began with two central questions What is a school like whose students enter with a determined disposition to attend college and all of whom are selected on the promise they display for college success What can be learned from studying Edgewood Academy that transcends the particular case of this school The volume opens with a description of how moral choices look when they are made by the participants in an exceedingly wealthy school There is a general picture of the Academy a discussion of the processes the school uses to insure the quality of its students and educators and an overview of teachers and students that reveals what is commendable about each group These chapters clarify what a school of ample financial means and wise leadership can do Peshkin goes on to reflect briefly on privilege and concludes with a discussion of what the very existence of a privileged school indicates about American society Schools he suggests are about much more than what goes on inside them they mirror what is and is not at stake for their particular constituents and function similarly for the nation Edgewood Academy's host community is not a village town church or tribe as in Peshkin's previous studies It is a community created by shared aspirations for high level academic attainment and its associated benefits Affluence and towering academic achievement are the two most relevant factors In this book advantage occupies center stage The school's excellence is documented not to extol its success but rather to call attention to what is available for its students that is not available for most American children The focus ultimately is on educational justice as illuminated by the advantage of Academy students that is on justice denied not because anyone or any group or agency consciously planfully sets out to do injustice to other children but because injustice happens as the artifact of imagined limitations of resources and means Peshkin's purpose is not to detail the particulars of how educational justice is denied to the many but to portray and examine the meaning of a privileged school where educational justice prevails for the few

Global Constructions of Multicultural Education

Carl A. Grant, Joy L. Lei, 2001-06 This book tells us how various global regions are dealing with three major concerns within the field of multicultural education: the conceptualization and realization of difference and diversity; the inclusion and exclusion of social groups within a definition of multicultural education; and the effects of power on relations between and among groups identified under the multicultural education umbrella. All of the chapter authors pay attention to these themes but at the same time they bring their particular interests and perspectives to the book, addressing issues such as linguistic, racial, ethnic, and religious diversity; class educational inequalities; teacher education; conceptualizations of citizenship; and questions of identity construction. In addition, the authors offer both historical and social contexts for their analytical discussion of the ideals and practices of multicultural education in a particular region. This is not a book that tells us about multicultural education with an international twist; it provides readers with different ways to think, talk, and do research about issues of diversity, difference, and the effects of power as they relate to education.

Rethinking Family-school Relations

Maria Eulina de Carvalho, 2000-10 This book addresses the complications and implications of parental involvement as a policy through an exploratory theoretical approach including historical and sociological accounts and personal reflection. This approach represents the author's effort to understand the origins, meanings, and effects of parental involvement as a prerequisite of schooling and particularly as a policy solution for low achievement and even inequity in the American educational system. Most of the policy and research discourse on school-family relations exalts the partnership ideal, taking for granted its desirability and viability; the perspective of parents on specific involvement in instruction and the conditions of diverse families in fulfilling their appointed role in the partnership. De Carvalho takes a distinct stance. She argues that the partnership parental ideal neglects several major factors. It proclaims parental involvement as a means to enhance and perhaps equalize school outcomes but disregards how family material and cultural conditions and feelings about schooling differ according to social class; thus the partnership parental involvement ideal is more likely to be a projection of the model of upper middle-class suburban community schooling than an open invitation for diverse families to recreate schooling. Although it appeals to the image of the traditional community school, the pressure for more family educational accountability really overlooks history as well as present social conditions. Finally, family-school relations are relations of power, but most families are powerless. De Carvalho makes the case that two linked effects of this policy are the gravest: the imposition of a particular parenting style and intrusion into family life, and the escalation of educational inequality. Rethinking Family-School Relations: A Critique of Parental Involvement in Schooling a carefully researched and persuasively argued work is essential reading for all school professionals, parents, and individuals concerned with public schooling and educational equality.
