

The background of the slide is a painting depicting a horse's legs and hooves in a muddy, war-torn landscape. The horse is dark-colored, and its legs are visible from the knees down. The ground is a mix of brown mud, dirt, and debris, with some wooden planks or branches scattered around. The overall tone is somber and historical, suggesting a scene from a war. The text is overlaid on a dark, semi-transparent rectangular area in the upper half of the image.

Congress. Senate,1887 A Compilation of the Messages and Papers of the Presidents (Complete) James Daniel Richardson,United States Presidents,1916-01-01 The messages of the several Presidents of the United States annual veto and special are among the most interesting instructive and valuable contributions to the public literature of our Republic They discuss from the loftiest standpoint nearly all the great questions of national policy and many subjects of minor interest which have engaged the attention of the people from the beginning of our history and so constitute important and often vital links in their progressive development The proclamations also contain matter and sentiment no less elevating interesting and important They inspire to the highest and most exalted degree the patriotic fervor and love of country in the hearts of the people It is believed that legislators and other public men students of our national history and many others will hail with satisfaction the compilation and publication of these messages and proclamations in such compact form as will render them easily accessible and of ready reference The work can not fail to be exceedingly convenient and useful to all who have occasion to consult these documents The Government has never heretofore authorized a like publication In executing the commission with which I have been charged I have sought to bring together in the several volumes of the series all Presidential proclamations addresses messages and communications to Congress excepting those nominating persons to office and those which simply transmit treaties and reports of heads of
