Abstract

The proliferation of Artificial Intelligence (AI) technology has profoundly impacted English language teaching, especially within the realm of writing instruction. Despite extensive research exploring the application of AI in education, a significant gap remains in studies assessing the influence of AI-enhanced teaching on learners' writing proficiency. In this context, this study employed a longitudinal research design to examine the effects of integrating Kimi—an AI tool in China—into English writing instruction, framed within the Complex Dynamic Systems Theory. The participants, 12 tertiary-level English learners from the southwestern region of China, engaged with Kimi to complete weekly essay assignments over a 14-week period. They also participated in seven writing tests. The findings indicate that participants' overall writing proficiency, as well as lexical and syntactic accuracy and complexity of their test essays, exhibited an upward trajectory and significantly improved. However, insignificant improvement was observed in overall writing fluency. Additionally, improvement in learners' writing proficiency varied substantially among individual learners. This study provides compelling empirical evidence for English-as-a-foreign-language (EFL) writing pedagogy, highlighting the crucial roles of differentiated instruction, dynamic assessment, and technology-assisted tools in enhancing students' writing proficiency. English teachers are urged to adapt their pedagogical approaches flexibly, leveraging these insights to support the holistic development of each learner.

Research background

English writing proficiency, as a productive skill, represents an essential dimension of overall English language competence (Bai & Hu, 2017). However, traditional English writing instruction confronts a myriad of challenges that impede effective learning and teaching. First and foremost, in conventional writing classrooms, the pedagogical process is predominantly teacher-centered, with instructors acting as

Shaping the College Curriculum Lisa R. Lattuca, Joan S. Stark, 2011-01-11 Shaping the College Curriculum focuses on curriculum development as an important decision making process in colleges and universities The authors define curriculum as an academic plan developed in a historical social and political context They identify eight curricular elements that are addressed intentionally or unintentionally in developing all college courses and programs By exploring the interaction of these elements in context they use the academic plan model to clarify the processes of course and program planning enabling instructors and administrators to ask crucial questions about improving teaching and optimizing student learning This revised edition continues to stress research based educational practices The new edition consolidates and focuses discussion of institutional and sociocultural factors that influence curricular decisions All chapters have been updated with recent research findings relevant to curriculum leadership accreditation assessment and the influence of academic fields while two new chapters focus directly on learning research and its implications for instructional practice A new chapter drawn from research on organizational change provides practical guidance to assist faculty members and administrators who are engaged in extensive program improvements Streamlined yet still comprehensive and detailed this revised volume will continue to serve as an invaluable resource for individuals and groups whose work includes planning designing delivering evaluating and studying curricula in higher education This is an extraordinary book that offers not a particular curriculum or structure but a comprehensive approach for thinking about the curriculum ensuring that important considerations are not overlooked in its revision or development and increasing the likelihood that students will learn and develop in ways institutions hope they will The book brings coherence and intention to what is typically an unstructured haphazard and only partially rational process guided more by beliefs than by empirically grounded substantive information Lattuca and Stark present their material in ways that are accessible and applicable across planning levels course program department and institution local settings and academic disciplines It s an admirable and informative marriage of scholarship and practice and an insightful guide to both Anyone who cares seriously about how we can make our colleges and universities more educationally effective should read this book Patrick T Terenzini distinguished professor and senior scientist Center for the Study of Higher Education The Pennsylvania State University

Guide to College Writing Assessment Peggy O'Neill, Cindy Moore, Brian Huot, 2009-04-15 While most English professionals feel comfortable with language and literacy theories assessment theories seem more alien English professionals often don t have a clear understanding of the key concepts in educational measurement such as validity and reliability nor do they understand the statistical formulas associated with psychometrics But understanding assessment theory and applying it by those who are not psychometricians is critical in developing useful ethical assessments in college writing programs and in interpreting and using assessment results A Guide to College Writing Assessment is designed as an introduction and source book for WPAs department chairs teachers and administrators Always cognizant of the critical components of particular teaching contexts O'Neill Moore and Huot have written sophisticated but accessible chapters on the history theory application and background of writing assessment and they offer a dozen appendices of practical samples and models for a range of common assessment needs Because there are numerous resources available to assist faculty in assessing the writing of individual students in particular classrooms A Guide to College Writing Assessment focuses on approaches to the kinds of assessment that typically happen outside of individual classrooms placement evaluation exit examination programmatic assessment and faculty evaluation Most of all the argument of this book is that creating the conditions for meaningful college writing assessment hinges not only on understanding the history and theories informing assessment practice but also on composition programs availing themselves of the full range of available assessment practices

Self-Development and College Writing Nick Tingle, 2004-09-01 Nick Tingle investigates the psychoanalytic

dimensions of composition instruction in Self Development and College Writing to boldly illustrate that mastering academic prose requires students to develop psychologically as well as cognitively Asserting that writing instruction should be an engaging developmental process for both teachers and students he urges reaching for new levels of consciousness in the classroom to aid students in realigning their subjective relationships with knowledge and truth Drawing on psychoanalytic theory and twenty years of experience as a teacher Tingle outlines the importance of moving beyond usual ways of thinking abandoning the common sense of everyday reality and coming to understand beliefs as beliefs and not absolutes These developmental moves must be accompanied Tingle says by a new attitude towards language not as something that points to things but as a series of concepts that arrange the very things one points to And this development is necessary not just in order to perform well in the writing class but also to fully participate in and reap the academic rewards of structured university life Self Development and College Writing calls attention to the psychological destabilization this method may produce for students Tingle explains that if writing instructors are to respond to this destabilization they must conceive of the classroom as a transitional space or a kind of holding environment They must also become aware of their psychological allegiances to particular theories of writing if they are to construct such environments But the goal of the transitional environment is worth pursuing Tingle argues contending that university education fails to address students developmental needs With purposeful writing and deft analyses Tingle shows that this goal also affords a means by which to place writing courses at the center of the educational curriculum Conceived as a transitional space the writing class may support and stabilize students in their developmental passage thereby fostering an improved understanding of their academic work and more importantly an increased intellectual understanding of themselves and the complex world in which they live

Points of Departure Tricia Serviss, Sandra Jamieson, 2018-01-08 Points of Departure encourages a return to empirical research about writing presenting a wealth of transparent reproducible studies of student sources The volume shows how to develop methods for coding and characterizing student texts their choice of source material and the resources used to teach information literacy In so doing the volume advances our understanding of how students actually write The contributors offer methodologies techniques and suggestions for research that move beyond decontextualized guides to grapple with the messiness of research in process as well as design development and expansion Serviss and Jamieson s model of RAD writing studies research is transcontextual and based on hybridized or mixed methods. Among these methods are citation context analysis, research aloud protocols, textual and genre analysis, surveys, interviews, and focus groups with an emphasis on process and knowledge as contingent. Chapters report on research projects at different stages and across institution types from pilot to multi-site from community college to research university, focusing on the methods and artifacts employed. A rich mosaic of research about research points of departure advances knowledge about student writing and serves as a guide for both new and experienced researchers in writing studies.

Composition research consistently demonstrates that the social context of writing determines the majority of conventions any writer must observe. Still, most universities organize the required first-year composition course as if there were an intuitive set of general writing skills usable across academic and work-world settings. In College Writing and Beyond: A New Framework for University Writing Instruction, Anne Beaufort reports on a longitudinal study comparing one student's experience in FYC in history, in engineering, and in his post-college writing. Her data illuminate the struggle of college students to transfer what they learn about general writing from one context to another. Her findings suggest ultimately not that we must abolish FYC but that we must go beyond even genre theory in reconceiving it. Accordingly, Beaufort would argue that the FYC course should abandon its hope to teach a sort of general academic discourse and instead should systematically teach strategies of responding to contextual elements that impinge on the writing situation. Her data urge attention to issues of learning transfer and to developmentally sound linkages in writing instruction within and across disciplines. Beaufort advocates special attention to discourse community theory for its power to help students perceive and understand the context of writing.

Multiliteracies, Emerging Media, and College Writing Instruction Santosh Khadka, 2019-02-25. This book proposes a broad-based multiliteracies theory and praxis for college writing curriculum. Khadka expands on the work of the New London Group's theory of multiliteracies by integrating work from related disciplinary fields such as media studies, intercultural communication, World Englishes, writing studies, and literacy studies to show how they might be brought together to aid in designing curriculum for teaching multiple literacies including visual, digital, intercultural, and multimodal in writing and literacy classes. Building on insights developed from qualitative analysis of data from the author's own course, the book examines the ways in which diverse groups of students draw on existing literacy practices while also learning to cultivate the multiple literacies including academic, rhetorical, visual, intercultural, and multimodal needed in mediating the communication challenges of a globalized world. This approach allows for both an exploration of students' negotiation of their cultural, linguistic, and modal differences and an examination of teaching practices in these classrooms collectively demonstrating the challenges and opportunities afforded by a broad-based multiliteracies theory and praxis This book will be of particular interest to scholars and researchers in writing studies rhetoric and communication studies multimodality media studies literacy studies and language education Teaching Writing Christina Russell McDonald, Robert L. McDonald, 2002 Teaching Writing Landmarks and Horizons edited by Christina Russell McDonald and Robert L McDonald is designed to present an overview of some of the major developments in the establishment of composition studies as a field during the past thirty five years The essays are theoretically grounded but are focused on pedagogy as well Divided into two parts the first presents nine landmark essays selected and introduced by distinguished composition scholars and the second brings together eight new essays by emerging scholars
