Meaning And Reference:

Nondescriptive Meaning and Reference Wayne A. Davis, 2005-07-14 Nondescriptive Meaning and Reference extends Wayne Davis's groundbreaking work on the foundations of semantics. Davis revives the classical doctrine that meaning consists in the expression of ideas and advances the expression theory by showing how it can account for standard proper names and the distinctive way their meaning determines their reference. He also shows how the theory can handle interjections, syncategorematic terms, conventional implicatures, and other cases long seen as difficult for both ideational and referential theories. The expression theory is founded on the fact that thoughts are event types with a constituent structure and that thinking is a fundamental propositional attitude distinct from belief and desire. Thought parts ideas or concepts are distinguished from both sensory images and conceptions. Word meaning is defined recursively: sentences and other complex expressions mean what they do in virtue of what thought parts their component words express and what thought structure the linguistic structure expresses; and unstructured words mean what they do in living languages in virtue of evolving conventions to use them to express ideas. The difficulties of descriptivism show that the ideas expressed by names are atomic or basic. The reference of a name is the extension of the idea it expresses, which is determined not by causal relations but by its identity or content together with the nature of objects in the world. Hence a name's reference is dependent on but not identical to its meaning. A name is directly and rigidly referential because the extension of the idea it expresses is not determined by the extensions of component ideas. The expression theory thus has the strength of Fregeanism without its descriptivist bias and of Millianism without its referentialist or causalist shortcomings. The referential properties of ideas can be set out recursively by providing a generative theory of ideas, assigning extensions to atomic ideas, and formulating rules whereby the semantic value of a complex idea is determined by the semantic values of its components. Davis also shows how referential properties can be treated using situation semantics and possible worlds semantics. The key is to drop the assumption that the values of intension functions are the referents of the words whose meaning they represent and to abandon the necessity of identity for logical modalities. Many other pillars of contemporary philosophical semantics, such as the twin earth arguments, are shown to be unfounded.

Meaning and Reference A. W. Moore, 1993 The aim of this series is to bring together important recent writings in major areas of philosophical inquiry selected from a wide variety of sources, mostly periodicals, which may not be conveniently available to the university student or the general reader. The editor of each volume contributes an introductory essay on the items chosen and on the question which they deal with. A selective bibliography is appended as a guide to further reading.

Things, Facts and Events ,2022-04-19 The volume deals with ontological and semantical issues concerning things facts and events Ontology tells us about what there is whereas semantics provides answers to how we refer to what there is Basic ontological categories are commonly accepted along with basic linguistic types and linguistic types are accepted as basic if and because they refer to acknowledged ontological categories In that sense both disciplines are concerned with structure the structure of the world and the structure of our language An extended introduction overviews the topic as a whole presenting in detail its history and the main contemporary approaches and discussions More than 20 contributions by internationally acknowledged scholars make the volume a comprehensive study of some very fundamental philosophical entities

What Can't be Said Yasuo Deguchi, Jay L. Garfield, Graham Priest, Robert H. Sharf, 2021-02-12 Typically in the Western philosophical tradition the presence of paradox and contradictions is taken to signal the failure or refutation of a theory or line of thinking This aversion to paradox rests on the commitment whether implicit or explicit to the view that reality must be consistent In What Can't be Said Yasuo Deguchi Jay L. Garfield Graham Priest and Robert H. Sharf extend their earlier arguments that the discovery of paradox and contradiction can deepen rather than disprove a philosophical position and confirm these ideas in the context of East Asian philosophy They claim that unlike most Western philosophers many East Asian philosophers embraced paradox and provide textual evidence for this claim Examining two classical Daoist texts the Daodejing and the Zhaungzi as well as the trajectory of Buddhism in East Asia including works from the Sanlun Tiantai Chan and Zen traditions and culminating with the Kyoto school of philosophy they argue that these philosophers' commitment to paradox reflects an understanding of reality as inherently paradoxical revealing significant philosophical insights

Experiment and the Making of Meaning D.C. Gooding, 2012-12-06 the topic of meaning is the one topic discussed in philosophy in which there is literally nothing but theory literally nothing that can be labelled or even ridiculed as the common sense view Putnam The Meaning of Meaning This book explores some truths behind the truism that experimentation is a hallmark of scientific activity Scientists' descriptions of nature result from two sorts of encounter they interact with each other and with nature Philosophy of science has by and large failed to give an account of either sort of interaction. Philosophers typically imagine that scientists observe, theorize, and experiment in order to produce general knowledge of natural laws, knowledge which can be applied to generate new theories and technologies. This view bifurcates the scientist's world into an empirical world of pre-articulate experience and know-how and another world of talk, thought, and argument. Most received philosophies of science focus so exclusively on the literary world of representations that they cannot begin to address the philosophical problems arising from the interaction of these worlds: empirical access as a source of knowledge, meaning and reference, and of course realism. This has placed the epistemological burden entirely on the predictive role of experiment, because it is argued that testing predictions is all that could show that scientists' theorizing is constrained by nature. Here a purely literary approach contributes to its own demise. The epistemological significance of experiment turns out to be a theoretical matter; cruciality depends on argument, not experiment.

Old Russian Possessive Constructions Hanne Martine Eckhoff, 2011-10-27. This book is a detailed study of the possessive semantic space within the framework of construction grammar. Using corpus data from Old Church Slavonic and Old Russian, the book uses semantic maps to document the relationship between form and meaning in a set of semantically closely related syntactic constructions that can all express adnominal possession and all partially overlap. The book also traces the development of these constructions from the earliest Slavic attestations towards Modern Russian, thus also using the semantic maps as a diachronic tool. This approach results in a much improved analysis of the data at hand. The competing possessive constructions are treated as partly synonymous constructions in the same semantic space. Changes are then seen to follow paths in this space. The constructionist perspective also allows discerning the relative contributions of the possessor nominal, the possessee nominal, and properties of the constructions themselves. The book is a contribution to Slavic historical linguistics, to the general understanding of adnominal possession, and to forwarding functionalist approaches to syntactic change.
