Mechamment Berbere:

Translating Pain Madelaine Hron, 2010-10-23 In the post Cold War post 9 11 era the immigrant experience has changed dramatically Despite the recent successes of immigrant and world literatures there has been little scholarship on how the hardships of immigration are conveyed in immigrant narratives Translating Pain fills this gap by examining literature from Muslim North Africa the Caribbean and Eastern Europe to reveal the representation of immigrant suffering in fiction Applying immigrant psychology to literary analysis Madelaine Hron examines the ways in which different forms of physical and psychological pain are expressed in a wide variety of texts She juxtaposes post colonial and post communist concerns about immigration and contrasts Muslim world views with those of Caribbean creolite and post Cold War ethics Demonstrating how pain is translated into literature she explores the ways in which it also shapes narrative culture history and politics A compelling and accessible study Translating Pain is a groundbreaking work of literary and postcolonial studies

Rites of the Republic Mark Ingram, 2011-02-28 In this fascinating exploration of citizenship and the politics of culture in contemporary France Ingram examines two theatre troupes in Provence one based in a small town in the rural part of the Vaucluse region and the other an urban project in Marseille France's most culturally diverse city Both troupes are committed to explicitly civic goals in the tradition of citizens theatre Focusing on the personal stories of the theatre artists in these two troupes and the continuities between their narratives their performances and the national discourse directed by the Ministry of Culture Ingram examines the ways in which these artists interpret universalistic ideals underlying both art and the Republic in their theatrical work In the process he charts the evolution of new models for society and citizenship in a rapidly changing France
