Pisma Iz Robii:

The Balkans and the West Andrew Hammond, 2017-03-02 This collection of essays locates, investigates and challenges the manner in which the Balkans and the West have constructed each other since 1945. Scholars from the two sections of the continent explore a wide range of fiction, film, journalism, travel writing and diplomatic records both to analyse Western European balkanism and to study Balkan representations of the West over the last fifty years. The first section looks back to the Cold War, examining the divergent, often favourable images of the Balkans that existed in Western culture as well as the variety of responses that appeared in South East European writings on the West. The second section analyses the transitions that took place in representation during the 1990s. Here contributors explore both the harsh denigration of the Balkans which came to dominate western discourse after the initial euphoria of 1989 and the emerging tradition of contesting Western balkanism in South East European cultural production. Through this dual emphasis, the volume exposes the representational practices that help to maintain a deeply divided Europe and challenges the economic and political injustices that result. Despite the rise to prominence of postcolonial theory with its awareness of global inequality, the current crises in many parts of South East Europe have received scant attention in literary and cultural studies. The Balkans and the West addresses this deficiency. Ranging in focus from Serbian cinema to Romanian travel literature, from Western economic writings to Yugoslav fiction and from public discourse in Albania to NATO's vast propaganda machine, the essays offer wide insight into representation and power in the contemporary European context.

Heroine Abuse Thomas Gaiton Marullo, 2015-10-15
Fyodor Dostoevsky's first novel Netochka Nezvanova written in 1849 remains the least studied and understood of the writer's long fiction, but it was a seedbed for many topics and themes that became hallmarks of his major works. Specifically, Netochka Nezvanova was the first in Dostoevsky's corpus to focus on the psychology of children and the first to feature a woman in a leading and narrative role. It was also the first work in Russian literature to deal with problems of the family. In Heroine Abuse, Thomas Marullo contends that Netochka Nezvanova also provides a striking example of what psychologists today call codependency: the ways often deviant and destructive in which individuals bond with people, places and things as well as with images and ideas to cope with the vicissitudes of life. Marullo shows how at age twenty-eight Dostoevsky intuited and illustrated the workings of relationship addiction almost a century and a half before it became the scholarly focus of practitioners of mental health. The moral monsters, infernal women, children, adults and adult children who populate Netochka Nezvanova seek codependence in people, places and things and in images, ideas and ideals to satiate cravings for love, dominance and control as well as to indulge in narcissism, sexual perversion and other aberrant or alternative behaviors. Indeed, in no other work would Dostoevsky examine such phenomena as pedophilia and lesbianism with such abandon. Racing from tie to tie, bond to bond and caught in a debilitating loop that they claim to detest but sadomasochistically enjoy, the characters in Netochka Nezvanova wreak havoc on themselves and the world. They do so moreover with impunity, their addictions moving them from momentary exultation as self-styled extraordinary men and women through prolonged darkness and despair and once again to old and new addictions for physical and emotional release. Readers of Heroine Abuse will see Netochka Nezvanova as a timeless model in depicting codependency in the world of the twenty-first century as it did in St. Petersburg in 1849. Marullo's original work will appeal to scholars and students of Russian and comparative fiction, to doctors, psychologists and therapists, to laymen and women interested in relationship addiction and finally to codependents and relationship addicts of all types.

During World War II over half a million men and women under Nazi occupation who lacked German citizenship were forcibly conscripted into the German Reichsarbeitsdienst and the Wehrmacht. The Nazis sought to legitimize this conscription by labeling these individuals as deutsche Volkszugehörige or Deutschstämmige despite it being a clear violation of international law. This collection explores the lives of these non-German conscripts, focusing on individuals from Slovenia, Poland, Silesia, Luxembourg, Belgium and France. Each chapter adopts an actor-centered approach, examining their daily lives, social dynamics, recruitment, military deployment and experiences in German uniform under coercion. The authors cover cases of desertion and escapes to neutral countries along with the repercussions for families, tracing the capture of conscripts as POWs and the complex processes of redeployment by the Allies against the Germans and the re-conscripted by national governments Through a rich collection of ego documents and personal records this work vividly captures their complex realities offering nuanced insights into the dynamics of occupation coercion and the shifting allegiances that defined wartime and post war Europe ...kiedy dojrzejemy jako kultura...
